Conventions In Kentucky Back Landon As Nominee

Missouri Pledges 2 More Delegates

Gov. Buck, of Delaware, Laughs Away Self as Running Mate.

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., March 30.—Strong indorsement of the Presidetnial candidacy of Gov. Alf M. Landon was pledged by Republican conventions in Kentucky today. Seven of the State's nine Congressional districts favored the Kansan. Each district selects two delegates to the Cleveland convention.

In one district, the Fifth, which includes Covington, delegates were not instructed.

The district comprising Louisville will not meet until tomorrow, prior to the State convention, at which four delegates at large will be elected.

Some State party leaders including Robert H. Lucas, Louisville, former executive director of the Republican National Committee, predicted last week that Kentucky's delegation to the national convention would go uninstructed.

He said he understood local supporters of the Kansan and of Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, preferred an uninstructed delegation to obviate a fight on the floor of the State convention.

Missouri Delegates Pledged.

Tarkio, Mo., March 30 (AP).—The two Third Missouri district delegates to the Republican National Convention were pledged to Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas for the Presidential nomination late today by vote of the district convention. Eight of the ten national convention delegates so far selected in Missouri have been pledged to Landon.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, March 30.—Gov. C. Douglas Buck, of Delaware, here today to confer with Gov. Alf M. Landon, predicted the Kansas Governor would be the Republican Presidential nominee, but laughed at mention of himself as a possible Vice Presidential candidate.

"In my opinion," the Deleware chief executive said in a statement at a press conference late today, "Gov. Landon has the best chance of any of those being mentioned to be nominated."

Asked about discussion of himself for second place on the ticket, Gov. Buck smiled and said, "There's nothing to it."

Gov. Buck was one of three prominent Republicans who were luncheon guests at the Governor's residence. The others were E. L. Colladay, national committeeman for the District of Columbia, and J. Reuben Clark, Salt Lake City, former Ambassador to Mexico.

The visit of these leaders came the same day John D. M. Hamilton, Kansas national committeeman, arrived home from Washington, where he has opened headquarters as national organizer for Landon supporters.

To Confer With Governor.

Hamilton, who likewise predicted a Landon victory at the Cleveland national convention, planned to confer with the Kansas Governor before returning to Washington tomorrow.

Colladay, a former Hutchinson, Kans., attorney, said he expected Landon to have 250 votes on the first ballot and to win the nomination by the fourth.

Clark declined to comment on national politics.

Gov. Buck, in his statement, said: "I think Gov. Landon has three outstanding attributes, namely, a wonderful personality, a record of an able executive and the advanage of a strategic geographical position.

"The East, as I can detect it, is decidedly more favorable toward Landon than any other candidate in the picture."

He said he expected the Delaware delegation to be uninstructed, but

Free U. S. Press Makes Too Free With Iran, Shah Recalls Envoys

Ruler Irate Because Newspapers Were Not Curbed by Government in Comment on Djalal's Arrest; Action Follows Earlier Similar Protests.

By Sidney Olson.

The Shah of Iran, Riza Pahlavi, wounded by the very free freedom of the press in the United States, last night recalled all diplomatic and consular representatives of his government from this country.

His action followed his recall last autumn of Ghaffar (You-Can't-Arrest-Me) Djalal, the Iranian Minister, who figured picturesquely in the international incident of last Thanksgiving eve which came to be known as "L'Affaire Elkton." The Persian diplomat, speeding through the wide, shady streets of Elkton, Md., was arrested by Police Chief Jacob Biddle and Constable Clayton Ellison for driving at "a ridiculous rate of speed." He claimed diplomatic immunity, was at once released, and proceeded to reap a harvest of apologies ranging from the local authorities to Gov. Harry W. Nice, of Maryland, and Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

The Shah, who rose to his eminence from humble beginnings as a stable boy in the Persian Cossacks, is known to have resented allegedly discourteous remarks in the American press on the incident. His representatives here over a long period of years have urged the State Department to suppress all

Paid as Residuary Share of Sugar Payments, Says Vandenberg.

'Objection' of Wallace to Withholding Data Is Called Captious.

Renewing his fight against secrecy surrounding payment of huge AAA farm benefits, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, told the Senate yesterday he had reliable information that one New York bank had received $705,488 and that a Puerto Rican sugar company had been paid $961,064 in farm benefits.

The Michigan Senator is asking for adoption of a resolution demanding of Secretary Wallace information on all benefit payments of $10,000 or more.

Vandenberg told the Senate that Wallace is objecting to giving that body the information on the ground that the mechanical difficulties are too great and that names of recipients of farm checks should be protected from publicity.

"I consider the objections to be capitous and disingenuous," he said. "They do not meet the issue. They avoid it. Some better reasons should be presented for maintaining secrecy respecting this gigantic distribution of a billion dollars of public money, or the cloak of secrecy should be drawn aside."

Inopportune Time.

The Senator quoted Wallace as saying that the request came at an inopportune time because the comptroller's division is engaged in dissemination of $296,000,000 in benefit checks due farmers on last year's contracts.

"That is delightfully calculated to raise a protest which will smother the real issue," he continued. "It is excellent strategy—from the Secretary's point of view."

The new law, Vandenberg declared, "even more than its predecessor, permits the Secretary of Agriculture to disburse public money as he pleases, if he pleases, when he pleases and how he pleases." He said the comptroller's division of AAA could obtain the information for the Senate by employing 10 persons 17 days. He referred to the AAA payments as "the largest single sum of money ever disbursed by a nonelected officer of Government."

"No individual who draws subsidies from the public treasury—no matter how inherently worthy his cause or classification—is entitled to immunity from public scrutiny on this score," he said. "It is doubly a matter of public concern—and most emphatically a matter of congressional concern—when a billion dollars leaves the Treasury through checks that are written by an executive bureau answerable only to its own discretion."

Vandenberg repeated his previous statement that one beneficiary received $219,825 for not raising 14,587 hogs on 445 acres; that another received $168,000 for not planting 7,000 acres of cotton, and that a third was paid $78,638 for not raising wheat.

Pointing out that he is asking information only about large payments, the Senator said the "so-called 'little farmer' would immensely like to know the full facts." He said benefit payments to domestic beet sugar farmers are being sharply curtailed.

"Is it or is it not true that a great New York bank collected $705,488 as its residuary share of AAA benefit payments to one Puerto Rican sugar operation in one year?" he asked.

Sugar Compensation.

"Is it or is it not true that a Puerto Rican sugar company received $961,084 in 1934-35 as compensation for restricting crops, and that this company concurrently increased its capital stock by a split-up of shares, increased its stock from 70,000 shares, selling it in the neighborhood of $160 a share—or a market value of $11,200,000—to 700,000 shares selling this week in the neighborhood of $40 per share, or a market value of $28,000,000?

"Are these pertinent considerations for the information of the Senate? Do they not involve serious questions of public policy? Shall they be left to mystifying speculation? Is it an answer for the distinguished Secretary of Agriculture to say that he is too busy to inform the Senate or that somebody needs 'protection?'"

Hauptmann Loses Court Plea; Hoffman Bars Executive Stay; Wife Says German 'May Talk'

Board Rejects Ladder, Ransom 'Evidence' of Governor.

Prisoner Has Urged Wilentz to See Him

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 30.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann was all but delivered to his executioner tonight as both pardon court and Governor apparently the only persons able to save him—refused to spare his life.

His death walk of only a few paces for the kidnap murder of the Lindbergh baby is set for tomorrow soon after 8 p. m.

However, reports circulated tonight that Mrs. Hauptmann had sent word to Gov. Harold G. Hoffman that her husband "might talk more."

These reports were denied officially, but they came from sources close to the Governor.

The double denial of clemency—first by the New Jersey Court of Pardons and quickly thereafter by Gov. Hoffman—seemed to have shattered Hauptmann's last hope.

Decision Is Brief.

In a crisply worded decision, the court of pardons, also known as the board of pardons, said:

"The second application for clemency made by Bruno Richard Hauptmann, before the board of pardons of New Jersey, sentenced to death for the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., March 1, 1932, was today denied."

Then Gov. Hoffman, who virtually pleaded for Hauptmann's life before the pardons court over which he presided, said:

"The action of the court of pardons was the final legal action in the Hauptmann case.

"There will be no reprieve."

Hauptmann's chief attorney, C. Lloyd Fisher, went to the State prison early tonight to give the prisoner the news that all hope apparently was lost.

Fisher came away from the condemned man tonight with a statement he was taking a message from Hauptmann to his wife, which was followed swiftly by reports that she had sent word to Gov. Hoffman that her husband "might talk more."

Hauck Cites Suggestion.

Even as the reports were being denied, Hunterdon County Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, jr., said that Mrs. Hauptmann had suggested to him recently that he talk to her husband.

Hauck said Mrs. Hauptmann expressed a belief that the condemned man might talk more readily to him.

Hauck added that he replied he would be willing to visit the prison only if Hauptmann had something important to tell.

The matter rested there.

It also was disclosed tonight by Attorney General David T. Wilentz that after the withdrawal of Samuel Leibowitz, New York criminal attorney, from the case, Hauptmann sent word to him by Defense Attorney Fisher for the two of them to call on Hauptmann.

Reply Similar.

Wilent's reply was the same as Hauck's, and he also suggested that Hauck, as county prosecutor, was the proper person to make such a visit.

Mrs. Hauptmann was not available for comment on the reports but one of her associates said she was "far from giving up hope" that a last-minute development would come to save her husband from the electric chair.

Fisher did not reveal the nature of the message he said he was taking to Mrs. Hauptmann.

She visited her husband while the Court of Pardons was hearing his clemency plea today and said he was hopeful.

Although it was reported she had made a request for permission to see Hauptmann again, Col. Mark O. Kimberling, prison warden, said he knew of no such request and that under usual prison regulations she could not see him tomorrow.

The source of the report insisted, however, that the request had been made.

Although Gov. Hoffman declared unequivocally today that there would be "no reprieve," the impression was general that in event of a last-minute confession or a development of similar importance, he might find a way to halt the execution.

Townsendite In House Hits Plan Founder

McGroarty Says Leader Is Straying From the Original Scheme.

By Edward T. Folliard.

The most bitter out-in-the-open quarrel in the history of the Townsend pension movement broke yesterday as a House committee marked time in its investigation.

Representative John Steven McGroarty (Democrat), of Tujunga, Calif., who, in his biography, explains that he is the "poet laureate of California," described his old friend, Dr. Francis E. Townsend, in language that was anything but lyrical.

"When Dr. Townsend accuses me of political ambitions," said McGroarty, "he is talking like a fool—just like a fool."

This plain-spoken prose was uttered as a result of an article under the name of Dr. Townsend which appeared yesterday in the Townsend National Weekly.

Rebukes Representative.

Rebuking McGroarty for appealing to Townsend Republicans in California to register as Democrats, Dr. Townsend said that "national headquarters cannot undertake to indorse the private political ambitions of Representative McGroarty."

Said McGroarty:

"Apparently the doctor believes he is privileged to be active in politics but that nobody else may be. His attitude and his unaccountable accusations may do the movement some harm, but I believe it will progress in spite of him.

"I didn't want to come to Congress and I don't want to stay. I was surprised and disgusted when the voters sent me here by a 12,000 majority."

The side-line battle between Dr. Townsend and Representative McGroarty cheered those opponents of the pension plan who are hoping the current House investigation of OARP, Ltd., will shatter the organization and remove it as a political threat.

Dr. Townsend is the father of the $200-a-month pension plan for the "old folks," but it was Representative McGroarty who first moved to translate the plan into legislation.

Heads Bloc in House.

As author of the old-age pension bill and head of the Townsend bloc in the House, the white-haired, 74-year-old McGroarty is even better known than Robert E. Clements, "co-founder" of the Townsend plan, who recently resigned as secretary-treasurer of OARP.

The break between Townsend and Clements, according to reports, came after a long-standing feud. On the surface, however, everything between them has been serene, Clements the other day referring to Dr. Townsend as a "great old guy."

McGroarty's remark yesterday about Townsend's activity in politics was taken to mean statements attributed to the Long Beach physician, from time to time, such as one recently that he favored Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, for the Presidency, and one prior to that favoring a third political party.

The Townsend Weekly has disavowed both statements.

Representative McGroarty, after saying that Dr. Townsend was "talking like a fool," issued a prepared statement saying that Dr. Townsend "seems to have abandoned the original plan which was embodied in the McGroarty bills, and which attracted the support of millions of persons."

Seeks No Quarrel.

"I am not seeking any quarrel with Dr. Townsend," he continued, "but it is apparent that the millions of members of the Townsend clubs must make a decision concerning the way they wish their representatives in Congress to carry on the fight for an adequate, respectable, old-age pension."

McGroarty said that Dr. Townsend had abandoned the original plan—payment of the $200 pensions with money raised by a 2 per cent

12,000 to Lose D. C. Aid Today; Face Evictions

Mrs. Greenway, Her Friend Unable to Feed Family, to Seek More Funds.

Twelve thousand District residents, to be dropped from the direct relief rolls today, faced the coming April "rent days" with despair, lightened slightly by the intercession yesterday on their behalf of Representative Isabella Greenway (Democrat), of Arizona.

In a letter to Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, Mrs. Greenway asked if it were true that no immediate provision has been made for assistance to persons being cut off relief. A friend of hers, she pointed out, had no way of providing food for his family with his relief check stopped.

Promptly on receipt of the letter, Deputy Administrator Aubrey Williams telephoned Elwood Street, director of the Board of Public Welfare, for a detailed picture of the District relief situation. Street told him that approximately 4,000 "employable" cases, representing about 12,000 persons, would be dropped today.

4,000 Families Affected.

These 4,000 cases, he pointed out, included 700 families who were already assigned WPA jobs, but who were receiving supplementary relief because of their budget needs; 2,000 families, the heads of which have been certified as eligible for WPA jobs, but who have not been transferred to WPA rolls, and 1,300 families who have come on relief since November 20 and are ineligible for WPA under the Hopkins ruling that only "employables" on relief on November 1 were to be transferred.

This information was incorporated into a letter which Williams despatched by special messenger to Mrs. Greenway. In this the deputy WPA administrator wrote:

"Since relief appropriations for the District are no longer handled in the form of grants from this or-

London Cabinet Reported Split On Parley Plan

Move to Meet French and Belgians in Rhine Brings 'Crisis.'

By the Associated Press.

London (Tuesday), March 31.—A serious split in the British cabinet over the advisability of holding military conversations with France and Belgium was described in some London newspapers today.

Authoritative sources said the cabinet had decided tentatively to begin the talks next week, but the Mail asserted that there was danger of a "cabinet crisis" over the issue and both the Mail and Herald mentioned certain members of the cabinet as viewing the proposed negotiations with misgivings.

Parley Planned with Allies.

These ministers, the newspapers said, are Sir John Simon, home secretary and former foreign secretary; Ernest Brown, minister of labor; Sir Godfrey Collins, secretary of state for Scotland, and Viscount Hailsham, lord chancellor.

Both the French and Belgians are to be consulted immediately, authoritative sources said, by diplomatic representatives as to the date when the preliminary discussions, agreed upon in the Locarno proposals in event of German refusal of the peace plan, are to start.

The location of the conference may be Brussels, informed sources indicated, after the cabinet had decided and Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin had assured the House of Commons the British general staff would not be allowed to involve the government in commitments.

Cabinet Has Final Say.

Any arrangement formulated by the military staff must be approved by the cabinet, the British prime minister emphasized.

(The plan for general staff conversations was attached to the Locarno peace proposals in letters from Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, to Pierre-Etienne Flandin, French foreign minister, and Paul Van Zeeland, Belgian foreign minister.

(These letters provided: If Germany refuses the proposals, which Reichsfuehrer Hitler subsequently did, England will join Belgium and France in consultations "for the purpose of insuring the security of your country against unprovoked

Supreme Court Nullifies Sugar Price Controls

New Deal Wins Denial of Review on Utility Act Decision.

By Felix Bruner.

The Supreme Court yesterday held that the Sugar Institute had violated antitrust laws in compelling "adherence to prices" and sustained a New York Federal District Court decision enjoining the institute from continuance of agreements affecting prices.

The court, however, declined to sustain the ruling of the lower tribunal that practices of reporting or relaying of information as to current or future prices should be eliminated.

The decision had been awaited eagerly by trade association officials as charting the way for future trade agreements. The Sugar Institute is a trade association including 15 of the country's large refineries.

The court also rejected an appeal for review of a case intended to test the constitutionality of the Wheeler-Rayburn holding company act. The case was brought by Burco, Inc., of Baltimore, to force the American States Public Service Co. to register under the act with the Securities Commission.

Lobby Inquiry Ends Field Job; Attacks Hearst

By the Associated Press.

Completion of the Senate Lobby Committee's field investigation was disclosed yesterday, simultaneously with a new outburst from the Senate floor against William Randolph Hearst for his criticism of the committee's conduct.

Senator Minton, a Lobby Committee member, aroused by editorial reference to the committee in Hearst's papers, told the Senate that "we are a better breed of swine than Hearst and the pusillanimous pen-pusher, the writer of this editorial."

Minton contended that freedom of the press meant to Hearst "license to traduce and villify public officers as swine and traitors to their country."

Ending of the field work of the committee, it was said, likewise meant an end to the much-criticized seizure of telegraphic correspondence, among it some of Hearst's wires.

Present plans, it was disclosed, call only for hearings, to be spread over a number of weeks, in the course of which financial sources and activities of a number of organizations—including the Liberty

The Number Racket

Murder of Baltimore Gangster Brings Investigators to Question Gambling Promoters Here; Clew Proves Fruitless.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Now that gangland guns have again barked defiance at the authorities investigating the "numbers racket," Washington once more finds itself in the middle of police investigations, underworld strife and renewed threats of violence and bloodshed.

Because the District, by its lack of adequate laws governing the "numbers" game, is a veritable haven for gun-toting racketeers and big-time gambling promoters, inquiry into the week-end slaying of Baltimore Charlie Gaither centered here yesterday.

Baltimore detectives, seeking a clew to the reason behind Gaither's apparent "spot" murder in Baltimore, came to Washington intent on questioning known gamblers and police characters."

"Gangland Never Talks."

But after a day's fruitless investigation, they returned to the Maryland city, still no nearer a solution than when they came. According to Lieut. William Fihelly, crack Baltimore detective, Washington has been eliminated as the source of Gaither's sudden demise.

"There appears to be no Washington angle," Fihelly said. "We came here because we didn't know where to start. We were just gathering up loose ends and trying to find a possible motive for the slaying."

Nevertheless, authorities turned first to Washington, knowing that "numbers" operations here are flourishing actually "within the law." Whatever angle they may have been seeking was discarded for lack of evidence. As one investigator put it:

"In cases of this kind, gangland never talks."

A clew that Gaither, indicted lottery boss, might have been the victim of a Washington gang came when a letter addressed to "Charley White" was found in the slain man's pocket. The letter was addressed

4 Children Drown Near Harrisonburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 30.—Four children were drowned tonight in the muddy waters of a pool caused by the recent flood waters of the Shenandoah River at Island Ford, 15 miles southeast of Harrisonburg.

The body of Russell Lam, 3, was recovered early tonight. Several hours later members of the Rockingham Fire Department recovered the bodies of Hazel Marie, 7, and Edgar, 5. Hundreds of persons, drawn to the scene by news of the tragedy, were aiding in the search for the body of Herbert, twin brother of Thomas. They are the children of Mrs. Mary Lam.

Details of the tragedy were meager. According to reports, the children were either wading in the pond or were standing on the bank when a section of the water-soaked earth caved in under them. At first it was thought the older children were frightened when the small child was drowned and refrained from reporting it. The pool is said to be as much as 75 feet deep in places.

Firemen are attempting to pump the water from the pool in an effort to locate the other body.

Cherry Blossoms Steal March On City, So Festival's Called Off

Washington's single-blossomed Japanese cherry trees along the Tidal Basin will bloom this week-end, despite the recent flood, but without benefit of the city's annual cherry blossom festival.

At a meeting in the District Building yesterday the festival committee voted to cancel the celebration because the buds are appearing earlier than April 16, the date originally set for the festival. It will be second year in succession that the cherry blossom festival has been called off, last year the cause being the Shriners' convention.

Although the blossoming of the cherry trees seems to have caught the festival committee napping, actually the blossoms are expected to bloom this year a week later than last. The earliest blossoming on record was in 1927, when the blooms burst into their full glory by March 20.

Upon the motion of Claude W. Owen, former vice chairman of the festival committee, it was decided "not to attempt any festival at all rather than do a half-way job."

Lack of a festival will not interfere with the Japanese Embassy's observation of the blossoming of the trees.

Commissioner Hazen, as chairman of the festival committee, had planned a three-day celebration beginning with a sunrise ceremony on April 16 and winding up with a parade on the 18th.

Mercury Up to 76; Rain Likely Today

A new record for 1936 was set yesterday when the temperature reached a high mark of 76 degrees at 3:45 p. m.

On March 15 and 16 the reading was 75, the Weather Bureau said, and on one occasion it was reported unofficially at 76. Yesterday's mark, however, stands officially.

Today will see an end to the soaring temperature, the bureau predicted, and cloudy skies will bring rain and cooler weather.

New Sources To Boost Tax Yield Sought

House Committee Hears Business Witnesses Assail Plan.

By Robert C. Albright.

Tapping of new revenue sources to increase the yield of the $799,000,000 tentative tax program over the next three-year period yesterday was urged on the House Ways and Means Committee by Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy V. Helvering as the wealth-distributing plan moved into the public hearing stage.

Business witnesses poured their first hot flood of criticism into the revolutionary tax plan. The committee was caught between Treasury insistence that proposals fell shy of revenue requirements, business testimony that it raises revenue from the wrong sources, and a charge by a Democratic committeeman that "it will destroy every small incorporated business institution in the country."

At one point Chairman Robert L. Doughton cracked back at a spokesman from a Boston, Mass., corporation that its president had earned $30,442.71 in salary and bonus in the fiscal year 1935, when the company declared no dividends. The incident brought charges of "crack-down" tactics from Republican members.

Doughton put the salary figure in the record when Melville F. Weston, representing Raymond-Whitcomb, Inc., declined to give the salary of Gilbert E. Fuller, president. In so doing Doughton referred to salary figures made public through the Ways and Means Committee by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. The chairman told reporters he intended to make further "occasional" use of the salary list.

Past Debts Are Cited.

Taking the travel tours and cruises business as an example of "personal service" business concerns that would be hard hit by the new corporation tax rates, Weston had put in some telling licks at the bill, which he charged would work havoc with corporate sinking funds and force a company to pay "one-fifth of all it earned merely for the privilege of paying off past debts."

Speaking for the Treasury, Helvering led the procession of witnesses by reading from a 16-page prepared statement, expressing harmony with the tax principles embraced in the Ways and Means subcommittee's tentative draft, but reiterating it was short of revenue requirements. Privately, however, committee members said they were satisfied with the amount of revenue raised by the plan.

The schedule of rates proposed by the subcommittee for the corporation income tax, taken in conjunction with the recommended special treatment for certain classes of corporations, would produce additional revenues estimated at $591,000,000, as compared with the figure of $620,000,000 that the President indicated was needed," Helvering told the group.

"More important, however, is the fact that the sub-committee has not made complete provision for the additional temporary revenues that will be required. It seems to me that your committee should consider whether there are not additional sources of temporary revenue that can be provided for the next two or three years to bridge this gap and to bring the measure that is to be enacted into full consistency with the President's recommendations for redressing the budget estimates."

Refers to Processing Taxes.

Helvering plainly had reference to the $221,000,000 in processing taxes recommended by the President, but voted out of the preliminary report by the Ways and Means sub-committee. Observers believed it unlikely the House group would change its mind on processing taxes, but the Senate Finance Committee is scheduled to "consider" them.

Hardly had yesterday morning's hearings adjourned before Representative Arthur P. Lamneck, of Ohio, Democratic member of the committee, indicated the corporate tax fight will be more than a mere partisan issue by taking the House floor to assail it. In effect, he said that under the levy it will no longer be possible for a corporation to run its own affairs.

"The theory back of such a revolutionary piece of legislation is that we are going to force the corporation to do what Congress says," he shouted.

Referring to the maximum rate of 42½ per cent tax on corporations which retain all of their earnings, to 22½ per cent, the highest rate ever assessed by England on its corporations.

"I warn you," said Lamneck, "that if this tax bill is passed it will destroy every small incorporated business institution of the country, and will so impair the credit, the earning power and the stability of large corporations that it will result in their being unable to continue on a profitable basis."

He argued that if the plan was too drastic for banks and insurance companies (exempted from the high corporate levy by the sub-committee), it should not be applied to other business institutions, for the same reason.

"By our tax program we penalize initiative, we penalize frugality and we penalize all other business virtues that tend to build and not to destroy," he added, calling on members not to pass the bill "simply because somebody requested it."

As a substitute, Lamneck suggested that the present corporation income tax be increased to raise an additional $500,000,000; that the present exemption of dividends from the normal income tax be repealed, to raise another $270,000,000, and that no windfall tax be assessed against any processor whose profit was less than 6 per cent of invested capital, plus depreciation, depletion, etc., for the period of the tax. Otherwise, he predicted that under the windfall tax the Government "will own every small pork-packing plant in the United States."

Lamneck renewed his arguments before the Ways and Means Committee at afternoon hearings, winning from Weston an admission that his alternative plan would be preferable.

Witnesses following Helvering before the committee included M. L. Sideman, of the New York Board of Trade, who said the committee's tax proposal would benefit the strong, well-established corporations and penalize the weak; and William S. Bennett, of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, who vigorously protested the proposal to subject to taxation dividends from income accumulated before March, 1913.

Sideman told the committee:

"The taxing of corporation profits as is now proposed would turn upside down the established methods of producing Government revenue from corporation revenue. There would therefore necessarily have to be worked out a completely new system of income and tax interrelationship between the corporation and the individual."

Sideman insisted the sub-committee's report was at variance with the President's proposals on this point. He proposed that shareholders be given a "credit" for taxes already paid by a corporation before the "same money" is taxed again when paid to the individuals in dividends.

Favored treatment for special types of corporations, such as exemptions granted banks and insurance companies, was opposed by Internal Revenue Commissioner Helvering in his opening testimony. He asked that they "be kept at a minimum consistent with fairness and sound public policy.

"I should like to emphasize," he said, "that virtually every case of special treatment involves a loss of revenue, and I should like to emphasize further that every case of exemption tends to impair the general symmetry and equity of the proposed measure."

Helvering admitted that taxing of large corporate wealth was one of the purposes of the bill, but denied there is any "intention or desire" to interfere with internal management of business enterprises, such as charged by Lamneck.

"The object is," he said, "rather, to see that, whatever the decisions of corporate managements, the Federal Government shall not be unreasonably and inequitably deprived of necessary revenues."

Helvering said the bill had a threefold purpose—to eliminate existing "inequalities in taxation of business profits as between incorporated and unincorporated business; to remove "a very important source of tax avoidance," and to increase revenues sufficiently to balance the "regular" budget, omitting expenditures for relief.

Helvering estimated the proposed "windfall" tax would raise only $80,000,000, as against the more than $100,000,000 estimated by the subcommittee.

His testimony was sharply criticized by Republican members, led by Representative Frank Crowther, of New York, who called it "naive," pointed out he had used the President's name ten times and took issue with Helvering's assertion that the Government was not trying to tell corporations how to run their business.

"As a matter of fact," said Crowther, "these are pressure rates designed to force corporations to distribute their profits."

Helvering countered that although the new program might not "be giving the corporations anything they didn't already have," it would permit maintenance of an adequate reserve cushion by enabling companies to hold back 100 per cent of earnings over three years without penalty taxes.

Representative Roy O. Woodruff (Republican), Michigan, contended the Administration's proposals were not truly wealth-taxing because they would force wealthy persons to take money out of productive enterprise and place it in tax-exempt securities.

Helvering said such an exodus would increase the price of tax-exempt securities to a point "so high people won't be able to buy them." He said "someone would take their places" if the large taxpayers take their money out of productive enterprises.

Representative Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, and Daniel A. Reed, of New York (Republicans), said the proposed corporation earnings tax had been tried in Norway, but the rate was greatly lowered after it was found it placed new business enterprise at a distinct disadvantage.

Trade Associations Appear to Have Won Victory in Supreme Court Ruling.

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN

IN the Supreme Court's decision yesterday sanctioning as legal under the antitrust laws agreements for the open announcement of prices and terms in accordance with the customs" of an industry, trade associations seem to have won a victory. At all events, the extent to which they may go in the field of open price lists has been given a new classification by the Sugar Institute opinion.

Some lawyers, after hearing the court's decision, gave the offhand opinion that progress had been made within the field of cooperative action in industry, since the high tribunal, injecting into its findings a rule of reason, contended that in determining the legality of trade agreements well-established practices within an industry should be taken into account.

Determination of the full effect and significance of the Supreme Court decision will require several days' study, even by those who are authorities in such matters. But it would appear that the Supreme Court has shown to trade associations a legal method whereby steps can be taken to abolish destructive and dishonest trade abuses.

Trade associations and those interested in efforts to bring about self-regulation of industry by concerted action and to eliminate ruthless and destructive competition in commerce regard the Sugar Institute case as one of the most important opinions rendered by the Supreme Court along this line in many years.

In their brief to the Supreme Court the defendants declared that the case presented "a number of fundamental trade association questions not heretofore decided by this court, and those questions have great importance at this time because of the collapse of the Federal Government's attempt at trade regulation under NRA."

"Commerce and industry," stated the brief, "are looking to this court for guidance in determining what they may do to abolish destructive and dishonest trade abuses without being held guilty of violating the Federal antitrust laws."

The importance of the case was further emphasized when the Cotton Textile Institute, the Window Glass Manufacturers Association, the National Lumber Manufacturers Association and the Consumers Goods Industries Committee intervened as friends of the court, urging the importance of clarifying the limitations which bound action which business might take to eliminate destructive trade practices.

The case originated when the Justice Department, after approving under the Hoover regime the Sugar Institute for six years, brought a suit in 1934 to dissolve the organization and to restrain the sugar companies which composed it—refiners of from 70 to 80 per cent of the sugar consumed in this country—from engaging in an alleged conspiracy in restraint of interstate commerce by various means, chiefly through agreements requiring adherence to openly filed prices.

There is no doubt that the sugar industry was in a demoralized condition in 1927 when the institute was formed. Whether "grossly unfair and uneconomical practices" within the trade, including price discriminations and secret concessions, were the sole cause of that condition is not certain.

The lower court seemed to think that the public "slimness campaign" of 1927—it was the year of the slogan: "When you think of a sweet reach for a cigarette"—had much to do with reducing consumption. Anyway, the sugar refiners formed their organization and undertook by mutual agreement to end unethical, unfair and dishonest practices in their trade.

They agreed among themselves to abolish all price discriminations between customers and to sell sugar "only upon open prices and terms publicly announced." The court found that the distinctive feature of this agreement was not only the advance announcement of prices but a requirement of adherence, without deviation, to the prices and terms publicly announced until changed.

This the lower court found to be in restraint of trade, since it tended toward price-fixing and tended to suppress competition. The lower court forbade such an undertaking, but held unobjectionable the filing of prices in closed transactions—that is, after sales have been made.

But the Supreme Court, while agreeing in general with the lower court, was not so strict. It held that the promulgation, in advance, of price changes was an established custom in the sugar industry and it ruled that factor should be taken into consideration. Consequently, it modified the lower court's decree to permit the open filing of current prices, as well—as advance price changes—but requirements to adhere to such prices were forbidden.

In other words, refiners may agree to exchange among themselves current or future price information—but they cannot agree to adhere to such prices until they give notice of a change. The court held that "such provision for publicity may be helpful in promoting fair competition."

Curiously enough, the first important anti-trust decision under the Sherman act handed down by the Supreme Court, in the case of United States vs. E. C. Knight Co., in 1895, was an effort of the Government to break up the sugar trust of that day. It was based on the purchase of four refining companies by the American Sugar Refining Co., which the Government contended gave the latter a practical monopoly in the manufacture of sugar.

But the Supreme Court ruled that "the fact that an article is manufactured for export to another State does not of itself make it an article of interstate commerce" and ruled against the Government.

Speaking of sugar, one might say that the New York bank, which Senator Arthur Vandenberg charged received $705,000 as its share of AAA benefit payments on a Puerto Rican sugar operation in one year, is a real "sugar daddy."

Missing Record Of Red Rider Delays House

Rep. Jenckes Believed Gone to Indiana With Only Hearing Data.

The sub-committee on education of the House District Committee yesterday discovered, to the chagrin of its members, that the only transcript on the anti-red rider hearings was missing.

The transcript, it developed later, was in the hands of Representative Virginia E. Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, who left for home immediately after being invited to attend the meeting of the sub-committee scheduled for yesterday.

When the loss was discovered Chairman Kennedy postponed indefinitely the meeting and telegraphed Mrs. Jenckes to return the transcript at once.

Until the record of the hearings is returned, the sub-committee will be unable to make a report on the Sisson bill to repeal the anti-red rider.

The delay will not hold up House action, however, as the measure could not reach the floor before April 27 under the present schedule of District legislation.

It may lead to the further questioning of Mrs. Jenckes, however, as several sub-committee members have expressed a desire to cross-examine her on charges of pro-communism she filed against the Board of Education.

If they await Mrs. Jenckes' return, which will be in about a week, the Indianian at least will be a move which she so far has refused to take.

Gang Is Indicted In Doctor's Death

Chicago, March 30 (AP).—The Cook County grand jury started the four confessed 'teen age slayers of Dr. Silber C. Peacock along the road of swift retribution demanded by Prosecutor Thomas Courtney today by voting a murder indictment against them.

Less than two hours and the testimony of a half-dozen witnesses intervened between the grand jury's convening and its return of true bills naming Robert Gothe, Durland Nash, Emil Reack—all 19—and Michael Livingston, 17, as perpetrators of the brutal "mercy call" slaying last January 2.

The four last night signed confessions of the crime before an informal "jury" of ten prominent citizens, a move instituted by the prosecutor to insure against pleas of duress when the case comes to trial.

After ten days—the minimum period allowed by the law between indictment and trial—Courtney said he expected the quartet to be defending themselves in court against the death penalty he will ask.

Italians Nearing Lake Tana Region

Rome, March 30 (U.P.).—Italians smashed through northwestern Ethiopia tonight in an offensive aimed at occupation of the British sphere of influence in the Lake Tana region.

Italian general headquarters in northern Ethiopia said the Fascist legions were within artillery range of Gondar, strategically important city north of Lake Tana.

Officials predicted that Gondar, which already has been bombarded from the air, will fall to the Black Shirts within three days, and that the entire Lake Tana area soon will be under Italian control.

Following the caravan routes from Socota, which was captured Saturday, the Italians continued their unobstructed march south. Their major objective was "to plant the Italian tricolor in the northern confines of Lake Tana."

Fratricide Flees Jail In Mysterious Escape

Cartersville, Ga., March 30 (AP).—Preston Saylor, former pugilist who slew his brother, Harry Saylor, in a quarrel over the management of their ancestral estate last November 4, escaped from jail here early today.

The grandson of a distinguished Georgia pioneer who won renown in the prize ring under the name of "K. O. Dugan," Saylor was sentenced to life imprisonment November 27.

How he got away from his second-floor cell was a mystery to attaches of the Bartow County jail.

5 New Meningitis Cases Are Reported in Virginia

Richmond, Va., March 30 (AP).—Five new cases of spinal meningitis were reported in three southwest Virginia counties last week, the State Health Department said today.

Three of the cases were in Wise, one in Scott and one in Lee.

Dr. G. Foard McGinnes, director of the Bureau of Epidemiology, said that quarantines in that section were applied by the local authorities.

Hearing Is Denied To Mrs. Vanderbilt

Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt was denied a hearing by the Supreme Court yesterday in her suit seeking to obtain custody of her 13-year-old daughter, Gloria.

The decision of the court was made known in one word, "denied," included in a long list of orders.

From Cleveland, the Associated Press reported that Mrs. Vanderbilt announced she would "keep on fighting for my child as long as there is a breath left in my body."

The decision of the Supreme Court apparently will make future legal action almost impossible, but Mrs. Vanderbilt declared that she would "find some way to go on."

A New York court awarded custody of the child to the girl's grandmother, Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney. Mrs. Whitney had brought suit against Mrs. Vanderbilt and later carried the case to the Supreme Court. Under the decision of the New York court the child may spend Saturdays and Sundays and the month of July with her mother.

Countess di Modrone, American Born, Has Son

Rome, March 30 (AP).—A boy was born here Saturday to Countess Edith Visconti di Modrone, of Milan, the former Edith Fairbanks, of Indianapolis. The countess and her husband, Count Ruggero Visconti di Modrone, have been living in Rome for several months.

Countess Edith Visconti is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren C. Fairbanks, of Indianapolis, and a granddaughter of Charles Warren Fairbanks, former Vice President of the United States. Her mother and her sister, Mrs. Frederick Poole, of Chicago, are here.

Laemmle in New York To Sell Film Company

New York, March 30 (AP).—Carl Laemmle, sr., president and founder of Universal Pictures Co., Inc., came to New York today for completion of a $5,500,000 deal under which control of the company would pass to the Standard Capital Corporation.

Paul Gulick, publicity director for Universal, said the negotiations will be completed Thursday when Standard Capital and a group headed by C. R. Rogers have announced they will pay $4,000,000 to Laemmle to take up an option granted last November in connection with a $750,000 loan to Universal.

Sum Represents 35% of Payment for Loans Long Overdue.

In the first small trickle of returns from the huge frozen mass of defaulted foreign debts to this country the Greek government has transferred to the United States Treasury the sum of $152,544, the State and Treasury Departments announced yesterday.

Always excepting payments by Finland, the only debtor nation fulfilling its financial obligations to the United States Treasury, this transfer of funds, accomplished on March 26, marks the first such payment received here in two years, since the wholesale foreign default occurred.

The payment announced yesterday represented 35 per cent of the semiannual interest on payments due last May 10 and November 10. On each of these dates $217,920 was due on the 4 per cent loan of 1929, when the United States loaned Greece $12,167,000 for resettlement of 3,000,000 Greek and Greek-speaking persons from Turkish to Greek territory. That loan had followed by ten years the advances of $15,000,000 in cash by this Government to Greece during 1919 and 1920 on which unpaid interest had accrued steadily to January 1, 1928.

Lewis Calls on Others.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, the pink-whiskered Democrat who has repeatedly assailed defaulting debtor nations for not even including interest payments in their annual budgets, said last night:

"I would like to turn now to the other big debtors, England, France, Italy, Belgium and the rest, and say to them out of scriptures: 'Go thou, and do likewise.'"

The payments made, as partial payments of interest on the 4 per cent loan of 1929, which was part of the Greek stabilization and refugee loan of 1928, were engineered by Demetrios Sicilianos, the Greek Minister to this country.

In the two-part agreement of May 10, 1929, the basis for all efforts since at settlement of the Greek debt to this country, the first part provided that Greece, in repayment for the $15,000,000 loans of 1919-20, and accrued interest, should issue bonds totaling $20,330,000, payable semiannually for 60 years (1929-1989).

Guarantees Provided.

The second part provided that the United States should lend Greece the $12,167,000 resettlement loan. In return for this Greece should deliver to the United States its 20-year gold bonds, at 4 per cent, with security guarantees and other advantages applicable to the stabilization and refugee loan of 1928.

Although Greece has partially defaulted all its external loans since 1932, the same percentages of interest payments were continued to the United States through November 10, 1934, under part 2 of the agreement. From 1932 to 1934 Greece paid, in the 35 per cent which negotiations had established, and which had been rejected by the European bondholders in favor of 50 per cent, a total of $337,776.

In the meantime, amounts due under part 2, and left unpaid, amounted to $1,179,000 on the principal and $751,824 on the interest, in that period, for a total of $1,930,824.

However, throughout this period nothing whatever was paid by Greece on the totals due under part 1 or under the Hoover moratorium agreement of May 24, 1932.

Assault Victim, 11, Receives Threats

Gastonia, N. C., March 30 (AP).—The Rev. W. Earl Armstrong, of Gastonia, revealed today the receipt of an anonymous letter threatening the life of his 11-year-old daughter, Jean, if two Negroes convicted of an attempted assault upon her are executed.

The minister also said that a Negro grabbed Jean's arm as the child was playing in her front yard yesterday, but fled when she screamed.

Grier and Frank Armstrong, Negro brothers, were convicted here two weeks ago of entering Armstrong's home at night and attempting to take Jean from the house. They were sentenced to die and now are at State's prison in Raleigh awaiting execution.

Armstrong said he received the letter Saturday.

Wife Is Stunned As Hauptmann Plea Is Denied

'Must Be Some Way Out,' She Sobs After Death Cell Visit.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 30 (AP).—The news that the Court of Pardons had again refused her husband clemency left Mrs. Anna Hauptmann stunned and grief-stricken today.

She flung herself on the bed in her hotel room, weeping quietly and moaning:

"There must be some way out. There must be some way out."

The self-possession with which she received previous setbacks in her husband's long and luckless fight to escape the electric chair seemed to desert her completely when she heard of the verdict.

C. Lloyd Fisher and Frederick A. Pope, Hauptmann's counsel, went to her hotel room after the court's decision was announced. The news preceded them and they found Mrs. Hauptmann weeping.

Reiterating her faith in her husband's innocence, Mrs. Hauptmann had declared after visiting him in the death house earlier today that "this is not the last time I shall see Richard."

"He did not say goodby to me—he said 'auf wiedersehen' ('until we meet again')," she related.

Mrs. Hauptmann, who obviously has lost weight, emerged from the death house while the Court of Pardons was considering her husband's plea for a stay of execution.

"I am sure the State of New Jersey cannot and will not take the life of an innocent man," she said. Tears came to her eyes as she exclaimed:

"Richard got tha tmoney from Isidor Fisch. Why doesn't the State look into that? that is the truth."

Talks of Son.

For the most part Hauptmann talked about their son, Mannfried, who was born two years ago last November and whom the condemned man has not seen since his arrest in September, 1934.

Mrs. Hauptmann, asked if her husband had expressed any desire to see Gov. Hoffman, Attorney General Wilentz or any other officials, replied:

"He didnt even talk about such a thing. He knows he is innocent. He feels sure his innocence, in itself, will save him."

Mrs. Hauptmann, who would not tolerate the suggestion that she might be seeing him for the last time, had to wait when she arrived at the prison.

Mrs. Charles Zied, wife of a Philadelphia gangster who also is under sentence to die tomorrow night, was in the death house at the time and two simultaneous visits are not allowed.

Approximately 200 curiosity seekers gathered outside the walls could hear prisoners carrying on a loud-voiced discussion of the Hauptmann case.

Hauptmann

active in the Governor's investigation of the case, said he would see the Executive tomorrow regarding the future investigation, and pointed out that the prison warden himself could delay the execution until the end of the week to permit an intensified effort to find new evidence.

Hicks said he talked to the Governor tonight and the latter indicated the investigation would continue, even after Hauptmann's death.

Meanwhile, State police and prosecution officials tonight questioned the son and daughter of Paul H. Wendel, held in the county jail here on a Lindbergh murder charge, who "confessed" the kidnaping and then repudiated it.

The questioning was conducted in the office of Attorney General Wilentz, but officials would not reveal its nature or purpose. Those questioned were Paul Wendel, jr., and Mrs. Dorothy Phillips, both of whom live here.

Wendel Questioned.

Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the State police, said Wendel, the prisoner, was questioned today about a reported "accomplice," and said Wendel asserted:

"Well I didn't commit the crime so I wound't have any accomplices."

These actions were linked with reports circulated during the day that an "accomplice" was in custody somewhere.

The quick succession of adverse decisions followed a six-hour session of the pardons court, called by Gov. Hoffman to consider a series of new developments in the case.

Among these were last-minute "confessions" by two other men, one of which was repudiated by its author. The other has been discounted by Federal investigators.

"He still has hope, and he kept his chin up in the air," Fisher said on leaving the prison after the death-house visit.

The condemned man kept repeating, "I can't believe it," the attorney said, and asked: "What are they doing about the man who confessed to the crime?"

He apparently had heard from his wife this afternoon about the now repudiated "confession" of Paul H. Wendel, former Trenton lawyer, who still is held on a charge of murdering Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., although authorities have indicated the charge would be dropped.

Fisher said Hauptmann "looked just as he did at Flemington when the jury found him guilty."

Retrial Only Possibility.

The only possible move remaining, the lawyer said, would be to apply to Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, the trial judge, for a new trial. But he indicated plainly he considered this forlorn move hopeless.

Mrs. Hauptmann, whose chances of seeing her husband again seemed slight, grew hysterical when the news reached her. Throwing herself on the bed in her hotel room she sobbed:

"There must be some way out. There must be!"

She had visited him only a few hours before and had left the death house expressing confidence that "his innocence will save him."

During the Court of Pardons session, held in executive session and marked by the collapse of Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, jr., it was known that the disputed kidnap ladder played an important part in Gov. Hoffman's plea for Hauptmann.

Hoffman, who has declared the prisoner's trial "reeked with unfairness, passion and prejudice," personally inspected the floor boards in the attic of Hauptmann's Bronx home, which allegedly matched one of those used in making the ladder.

The court listened to arguments by counsel for four hours and 32 minutes, taking luncheon in the hearing room. Hauck was temporarily overcome by excitement and strain, but was able to return to the chamber after a brief rest.

One of the eight pardon court members—Judge George VanBuskirk, of Hackensack—who heard Hauptmann's first clemency plea in January, was absent from today's session because of illness.

During the long session, the court presumably had considered these new developments, among others:

1. The lodging of a murder charge against Paul H. Wendel, former Trenton attorney, who repudiated a "confession" that he was the Lindbergh baby kidnaper.

2. The disclosure that Gaston B. Means, former Federal investigator, allegedly had "confessed" from his cell in Leavenworth Penitentiary that he killed the child.

Earlier Vote Was 7 to 0.

In addition, the court struggled through a mass of other confusing data with one of the seven members present—Gov. Hoffman—holding the expressed belief that Hauptmann's trial "reeked with unfairness, passion and prejudice."

By a vote of 7 to 0 (Hoffman did not vote) the court refused on January 11 to grant clemency, but Gov. Hoffman five days later granted a 30-day reprieve. The required resentencing delayed the execution hour until tomorrow at 8 p. m.

The court met in executive session, with all of its members pledged to secrecy, but it was learned that the qualifications of Arthur J. Koehler, who testified as a wood expert for the State, were under discussion.

Two and a half hours after convening, the court called for a transcript of Koehler's testimony, in which he swore that the famous "rail 16" once had been a part of Hauptmann's attic floor.

A representative of the New Jersey State police entered the room shortly afterward with the Koehler testimony.

When Gov. Hoffman visited the condemned man's home he was accompanied by Arch W. Loney, a PWA engineer, who later expressed the opinion that "rail 16" did not match the other boards in the attic flooring.

The call for Koehler's testimony, coupled with the presence in the building of a special contrivance used to gauge the angle of saw marks, led to the belief Hoffman was using the disputed ladder evidence as a focal point in his efforts to gain clemency or at least a reprieve for Hauptmann.

The testimony of Koehler, a Federal employe, who expressed from the witness stand the opinion that Hauptmann built the ladder found on the Lindbergh estate after the kidnaping, was one of the prosecution's strongest points at the Flemington trial.

In addition to the Governor, Hauptmann's cause was pleaded before the court by two defense lawyers, C. Lloyd Fisher and Frederick A. Pope.

Opposing them were Attorney General David T. Wilentz, who headed the State's forces at the trial, and Anthony M. Hauck, jr., prosecutor of Hunterdon County.

Few Curious Attend.

In contrast with the January session, today's deliberations attracted comparatively few curiosity seekers to the gold-domed Statehouse.

While the court was seeking to unravel the skeins of evidence that bound Hauptmann to the death house, the condemned man saw his wife.

When Gov. Hoffman entered the conference chamber of the pardons court he carried with him what an authoritative source said were at least two "confessions"—the repudiated statement of Paul Wendel and the Gaston B. Means statement.

Means was said by the Leavenworth (Kans.) Times to be in solitary confinement for alleged attempts to smuggle letters, one of them detailing his purported "confession," out of the prison.

Exonerates Wendel.

Prosecutor Erwin E. Marshall, of Mercer (Trenton) County, declared he did not believe Wendel was connected with the case. Wendel told authorities he was kidnaped, beaten and forced at the point of a gun to sign a "confession," although he knew nothing of the case except what he had read and heard.

The prosecutor said he would withhold action on a murder complaint lodged against Wendel by County Detective Chief James B. Kirkman until "the Hauptmann case is disposed of."

He said the Pardons Court was the "proper authority to pass upon the matter as it may affect Hauptmann."

Kirkman persisted in the belief he was justified in placing a formal charge against Wendel, declaring there was "more evidence than in the confession" which Wendel disclaimed. He declined to say what other evidence there was, and Marshall retorted:

"If he has this new evidence, why doesn't he bring it before me?"

Wendel, also under indictment on an old embezzlement charge, meanwhile remained in jail.

Means' Statement.

Gaston Means, whose statement has been discounted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was purported to have said he was hired to kidnap and kill the baby. Means is serving a term at Leavenworth for defrauding Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, Washington society woman, of $104,000 by promising her that he would produce the baby.

Another angle of the famous case which presumably played an important part in the day's deliberations was the ransom money, recovered and unrecovered.

Henry Kress, an investigator employed by the editor of an astrology magazine, said Gov. Hoffman had evidence tending to support Hauptmann's contention that the $14,600 in ransom bills found concealed in his garage came from the late Isidore Fisch.

Hopes Fade After Mrs. Hauptmann Leaves Jail

Myers Drops Venue Appeal; On Trial Today

Wilson Slaying Suspect Withdraws His Plea at Rockville.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Rockville, Md., March 30.—Ernest Myers, erstwhile Tri-State gangster, charged with first-degree murder in the "mistaken identity" slaying of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route carrier, withdrew his plea for change of venue here in Montgomery County Courthouse.

Myers, nervous and pale, toyed with his coat lapels as he appeared before Chief Justice Hammond Urner. With him were two of his underworld "pals," Albert McDermott, alias "Slim" Dunn, and Albert Sutton, who came to hear rulings on their appeals for new locales for their trials on the same charge.

Because of Myers' action, Dunn and Sutton heard the court hold their change of venue pleas in abeyance until tomorrow, at least, when Myers goes on trial for his life.

As Judge Urner postponed action in the cases of the two former convicts, State's Attorney James M. Pugh suggested that their cases be sent to Cambridge, in Dorchester County. Meanwhile, Thomas L. Dawson, attorney for Sutton, recommended Salisbury, in Wicomico County.

In cases where the charge involves a capital offense, it is mandatory that a change of venue be granted in the courts of Maryland.

Myers' action was advised against by his attorney, Samuel Levin, of Baltimore. The withdrawal of his plea caused a sharp verbal tilt in the sparsely filled courtroom.

"I want to be tried immediately," Myers told the judge.

"If I can get a fair and impartial trial, I want it here. I want to get things over with; you see, over with. I'm ready now, and I'll withdraw my petition."

Levin was on his feet in a moment. He protested, and threatened to withdraw as Myers' counsel.

"What if we wouldn't let you withdraw?" asked Judge Urner.

Myers made no answer.

Later Levin explained that Myers was depressed by his dreary life in death row at the jail in Washington.

"Last week a man was executed there," he pointed out. "It has been none too good for my client."

The gangster trio, believed to have lain in wait behind ambush in front of the home of Edward (Mickey) McDonald, the night before Wilson was slain, was brought to the courthouse handcuffed and under armed guard.

All three face execution by hanging for the sensational crime, which was committed late in October, 1934. All were brought from prisons where they were serving sentences—Sutton from Alcatraz, off the California coast.

Embezzlement In Stock Deal Is Charged to D. C. Broker

Kurtz, Socially Prominent, Surrenders to Federal Attorney Here.

Carl R. Kurtz, 44, socially prominent broker, was arrested yesterday on a warrant charging him with embezzling $3,100 from A. Steadman Hills, an attorney, with offices in the Munsey Building.

Brought to the office of John J. Wilson, assistant United States attorney by his own attorney, Milton King, Kurtz accepted service of the warrant, walked across the street to police headquarters, where he was booked, and then went to Police Court, where he posted bond of $2,000.

At King's request, Kurtz's preliminary hearing was continued for two weeks.

The broker, a member of the exclusive Chevy Chase and Metropolitan clubs, is alleged to have failed to turn over to Hills the proceeds of two Dominion of Canada bonds, valued at $2,000 and 10 shares of Armour Co. preferred stock. The securities were to have been sold and the proceeds applied to the purchase of $5,000 worth of bonds of the Republic Steel Corporation.

According to Wilson, the bonds were given Kurtz January 29. At the same time $2,000 was deposited by Hills in the National Metropolitan Bank to make up the difference between the two negotiations. The money was to have been paid Kurtz when he delivered the Republic bonds.

The securities given Kurtz to sell, Wilson also said, were sold through a brokerage house where Kurtz maintained an account.

Kurtz, a dapper figure with slightly graying hair, refused to discuss the case. He had been notified the warrant had been issued and he volunteered to surrender. The transaction, it was said, has been placed before the Securities and Exchange Commission for study.

Officials in the office of District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, declined to comment on reports that a sum of money much larger than that named in the warrant was involved in the case.

Soviet-Mongol Troops Seize 3 Japanese Aids

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Tokyo (Tuesday), March 31.—The tense situation between Japan and Soviet Russia in the "No Man's Land" between western Manchukuo and Outer Mongolia, was further complicated today by the reported seizure of three Japanese military agents by Mongol-Soviet troops.

The agents, a Manchu and two Koreans, were sent into the disputed territory at a point north of Lake Hanka to confer with the Soviet officers commanding Mongol forces in the region. They had not returned today, and it was believed they were held by the Russo-Mongol troops who hoped to gain information from them about the strength of Manchu-Japanese forces.

Meantime, the acute border dispute—in which Japan is supporting Manchukuo and Russia is backing Outer Mongol—was developing into a major controversy.

Headquarters of the Japanese Kwantung Army in Hsngking, capital of Manchukuo, announced that two Soviet-Mongol planes had dropped leaflets announcing they were "closing the border" in the region of Lake Boinor. Later the planes bombed a Manchu-Japanese outpost, killing one soldier and wounding four.

H.M.Dougherty Funeral Today At Arlington

Navy Engineer to Be Buried at 2 P. M., With Full Military Honors.

Henry M. Dougherty, 59, associate engineer of the Navy Department, who died at his home in Cathedral Mansions, 2900 Connecticut avenue, Sunday, after a short illness, will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery at 2 p. m. today with full military honors.

Born in Pennsylvania February 2, 1877, he was a graduate of the United States Military Academy, class of 1901. For two years after graduation he served as an officer of Cavalry, when he resigned to become associated with the J. G. White Engineering Co., of New York.

This company placed him in charge of various engineering projects in many sections of the United States and in Honolulu. For ten years he was chief engineer of the Chile Exploration Co., at Chuquicamata, Chile, and spent several years on engineering work in South Africa. Since last June he has been doing special work for the Navy Department.

He was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Dougherty is survived by his widow, Mrs. Bella Haines Dougherty.

Mrs. Coulter Declared Suicide; Was Depressed

San Antonio, Tex., March 30 (AP).—Mrs. Alice Morgan Coulter, wife of Harold K. (Duke) Coulter, former Army officer, shot herself because of despondency, Justice O. L. Wiley said today.

Her name figured prominently in the court-martial which resulted in her husband's dismissal from the Army and the action resulted in a divorce from William F. Morgan, sr. Mrs. Frances Riddle Coulter then divorced her husband and he married Mrs. Coulter.

Wiley said she probably was melancholy over separation from her son, William F. Morgan, jr., whose father, a Houston and Laredo oil man, gained his custody.

Maps Locate Sites Of Garden Exhibits

Richmond, Va., March 30 (AP).—The State highway department is co-operating with the Garden Club of Virginia in the observance of garden week, April 27 to May 2, by printing a State highway map showing the location of the more than 60 historic homes and gardens which will be open for inspection at that time.

The first copies of the map to be circulated in connection with the celebration were available today.

Garden week is sponsored annually by the Garden Club of Virginia, made up of 27 clubs throughout the State. The places to be thrown open to visitors during the week include some of the most famous spots in Virginia, historically as well as from the standpoint of natural beauty and landscape gardening.

Engineer Dies At the Throttle Of Locomotive

Fireman Discovers Albright Slumped in Seat; Rites Set Tomorrow.

Mose Albright, veteran locomotive engineer, who died as he had lived—at the throttle—will be buried tomorrow in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

In a quiet home at 717 A street southeast yesterday his widow prepared to pack his overalls and bandana in a trunk as Albright lay in the dim-lit living room. He will be buried in a green plot on a hillside, far from the rumble and din of the railroad he loved so well.

Death came unexpectedly to Albright, 40 years with the B. & O., 30 of these in the cab, as he was driving a fast passenger train through the night between Washington and Cumberland Saturday.

His hand still clutched the throttle, and he toppled slightly forward. Fireman O. W. Thompson suspected something was wrong, thinking that it was not like Mose not to slow down when the train thundered over tracks on low ground, where especial precautions had been taken because of recent floods.

Thompson, alarmed, shook the veteran engineer.

"Mose, Mose, slow down," he shouted above the roar of the train, and then he pulled the body of the engineer away and took the throttle himself.

As passengers slept peacefully, unmindful that they had, for a brief moment, been riding on a ghost train, Albright's body was brought to Washington. He apparently had been in the best of health when he bade his wife good-by and left for the Union Station to take his train.

"He had two interests," said Mrs. Albright yesterday.

"One was his home. The other the railroad, the B. & O.. That was his life. As long as the passengers were safe, I'm sure he'd rather have died on the job than anywhere else."

Apparently heart disease brought death.

Albright grew up with the rails. As a small boy on the farm in West Virginia he often went to the crossroads town nearest his home to watch the trains speed by.

"He told me he made up his mind then he'd be an engineer some day," declared Mrs. Albright.

Albright was a fireman only a few years. He rose rapidly to the freight service as an engineer, and 12 years ago began to drive fast passenger trains.

He is survived by five children, Lee and Clarence Maxwell Albright, and Mrs. Elmer Johnston, Mrs. Jack Minor and Patricia Albright.

Funeral services will be held in his home at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

S. G. McAlister, Local Realtor, Dies at Sibley

Funeral Rites to Be Held Wednesday; Burial at Union Bridge, Md.

Stuart G. McAlister, 63, a real estate operator in the city, died last night in the Sibley Memorial Hospital after a week's illness.

McAlister, who was born in Frederick, Md., practiced law here for several years after his graduation from George Washington University in 1915. After giving up his law practice he went into the real estate business, where he remained until the time of his death. He was associated with L. T. Gravatte, jr.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Wednesday at the Hysong funeral parlors, 1300 N street northwest. Burial will be in Union Bridge Cemetery, Union Bridge, Md.

McAlister, who was a widower, is survived by one son, Raymond G. McAlister, six sisters and two brothers. Two sisters, Miss Grace C. McAlister and Miss Gertrude R. McAlister, made their home with him at 219 Ninth street northeast. Other sisters include Mrs. Cora M. Grumbine, Hagerstown, Md.; Mrs. Robert L. Davidson, Hampstead, Md., and Mrs. I. Pearl Segasoose and Mrs. Morrison Smith, of Uniontown, Md. His brothers are John H. McAlister, Westminster, Md., and D. Earl McAlister, Minot, N. Dak.

The deceased was a Mason.

Pauline Schwab Is Dead; Mother Of Steel Leader

'Grand Old Lady' of Loretto, Pa., Succumbs Peacefully in Modest Home.

By the Associated Press.

Loretto, Pa., March 30.—In a modest home amid the hills over which Charles M. Schwab once drove a stagecoach his 93-year-old mother died peacefully today.

The end came for Mrs. Pauline Farabaugh Schwab after an illness of two weeks from pneumania. The last four days she had been unconscious.

In her lifetime she saw her son rise from a humble beginning as a $1-a-day stake driver in the mills to the presidency of the United States Steel Corporation and later chairman of the board of Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

Known as "Grand Old Lady."

Earlier, young Charles had made a livelihood driving the coach between Cresson and Loretto and clerking in the general store of A. J. Spiegelmire at Braddock, Pa.

He frequently visited his mother. Her birthday anniversaries always were occasions for a family reunion.

Mrs. Schwab was born in Loretto, where the inhabitants knew her as "the grand old lady." She spent most of her life here, active until illness forced her to bed in her home, situated just a stone's throw from her son's mansion.

Quilting and sewing took up much of her time in her late years. Her son, now 74, usually received a new quilt, her own handiwork, each birthday anniversary.

Mrs. Schwab was the widow of John A. Schwab, a banker. He died May 5, 1924, after they had been married nearly 63 years.

Had Four Great-Grandchildren.

At her bedside were two of her children, Edward Schwab, of New York, and Mrs. David Barry, of Johnstown. Another daughter is a nun in the cloistered order of St. Theresa of Lisieu, whose monastery here was built as the gift of her son, Charles. Mrs. Schwab also leaves a sister, Mrs. Susan Wertburger, of Altoona; 17 grandchildren and 4 great-grandchildren.

The steel man also built St. Michael's Catholic Church here, where Mrs. Schwab was a life member. She will be buried in the Schwab mausoleum here.

THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD

SUMMARY OF ANNUAL REPORT FOR 1935

THE 89th Annual Report of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company covering operations for 1935 will be presented to the stockholders at the annual meeting on April 14, 1936. The report shows that total operating revenues increased over 1934 by $24,143,487, or 7% (due in part to increase in freight rates), but continued subnormal, being 46% less than the annual average for 1925-1929. Operating expenses increased $17,132,347 (due principally to higher wages). The Company earned a net income of $23,849,798 as compared with $21,633,965 in 1934. Surplus for 1935 was equal to 2.8% upon the outstanding Capital Stock as compared with 2.5% in 1934. Surplus per share (par $50) was $1.38 as compared with $1.23 in 1934.

Dividend of 2% ($13,167,696) was paid on February 29, 1936, to stockholders and charged against net income for 1935.

FINANCE

The net increase in total funded debt was $3,564,340. The Company paid $6,043,000 equipment trust obligations which matured, and, in advance of maturity, $3,648,000 4% Secured Serial Notes. Provision was made to pay at maturity, Feb. 1, 1936, the balance of its Fifteen-year 6½% Secured Gold Bonds outstanding ($52,000,000), $8,000,000 having been purchased and cancelled during 1935.

To complete its electrification program and purchase new electric locomotives, the Company sold to the Government $8,410,000 additional Thirty-year 4% Secured Serial Bonds and $13,024,000 Twenty-year 4% Equipment Trust Certificates.

Since the close of the year, provision was made to redeem on May 1, 1936, the $10,000,000 Forty-Year 5% Secured Gold Bonds due November 1, 1964, partly out of treasury funds and partly through the sale on a 3.95% basis of $40,000,000 General Mortgage 3¾% Bonds, Series C, due April 1, 1970, thus effecting a substantial reduction in the annual fixed charges. $18,420,000 Fifteen-year 2¾% Equipment Trust Certificates also were sold since the close of the year on a 2.71% basis, the proceeds of which will be utilized in part payment for 10,000 new freight cars.

The last authorized increase in funded debt approved by the stockholders in 1931, is almost exhausted and approval of an additional $75,000,000 will be asked at the annual meeting. Meanwhile, the Company has met all its capital requirements and paid off over $140,000,000 of outstanding debt during that five-year period.

The net increase during 1935 in investment in road and equipment for the entire system was $4,378,916.

IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM

During 1935 the electrified line between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington was opened for complete operation of passenger and freight service. Electrification has resulted in an unparalleled transportation service to the public and placed the Company in an advantageous position to handle profitably increased traffic as business recovery proceeds. It also increased production and employment throughout the country.

Improved facilities for handling U. S. mail in Philadelphia, the new Newark Station, one lift-bridge and facilities requisite for operation of three tracks east of Newark Station were completed. Important additions and betterments were finished or progressed at other points.

NEW AND IMPROVED EQUIPMENT

Eighty-four electric passenger and four electric switching locomotives; 100 70-ton covered hopper gondola cars for handling bulk shipments of cement; 180 drop bottom containers for handling bulk materials; 8 large-capacity steam locomotive tenders for use in passenger express train operation; and two steel coal barges were placed in service. 10,000 new freight cars were ordered, of which 6,000 will be built in the Company's shops and 4,000 will be purchased. Air-conditioning was installed in 19 additional dining cars and 74 additional coaches. At the end of the year approximately 1,000 air-conditioned cars were operated on the System lines, the largest fleet of such cars on any railroad.

BETTER SERVICE

The schedule of the "Broadway Limited" operating between New York and Chicago was reduced to 16½ hours, its fastest time. Trains between New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Cleveland were quickened and rearranged to provide a maximum of service and more convenient times of arrival and departure. The "Congressional" between New York and Washington now covers the 225 miles in 225 minutes including six intermediate stops, the fastest schedule ever operated between those cities. Electrified operation also permitted faster schedules in the through service to and from New England and the South.

By an over-night collection and delivery service, less than carload freight time between many points was reduced one full day. On Sept. 1, 1935, a C.O.D. service was inaugurated, the railroad collecting the invoice price upon delivery and remitting to the shipper. All charges for collection and delivery for less than carload freight will be eliminated on April 1, 1936.

FREIGHT RATES

The railroads of the country have petitioned the Inter-State Commerce Commission for authority to continue as part of their regular tariffs the so-called emergency increases in freight rates on certain classes of traffic authorized April 18, 1935, and expiring on June 30, 1936. The additional revenue from the increased rates in the twelve months ending April 18, 1936, will be about $100,000,000, as against an annual increase, based on 1935 operations, of about $260,000,000 in expenses compared with 1933, due to higher wage levels, and higher costs of fuel and other materials and supplies.

STOCKHOLDERS

Capital Stock of the Company, at the end of the year, was owned by 227,251 holders, a decrease of 5,747 compared with December 31, 1934. The average number of shares owned was 57.9 shares.

Splendid work has been done by the employes in accomplishing the results recorded. The Company's stockholders and bondholders can materially aid by helping to secure additional traffic and thus increase revenue. The Pennsylvania Railroad cordially invites their active interest in getting people to travel and ship via the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Things that make Women more BEAUTIFUL

WOMEN want the very finest of perfumes, face powders, bath powders, body sachets, bath oils, cheek and lip rouge. They are confused when they go shopping, by the hundreds of bottles and boxes attractively displayed, and they find it difficult to choose from what is told on the wrappers. What they desire most, is a woman who will be honest with them, to shop and try out the new things and give a disinterested opinion. Disinterested because she is not manufacturing or selling any of these things, but trying to help the readers of her column to choose wisely . . . Mignon, who writes "Things That Make Women More Beautiful" in The Washington Post, does this for her readers. She takes the most scrupulous care not to give opinions on things which she has not tried out. Her opinion is not an arbitrary one, but is helped by the twelve women in her department . . . $55,000 Raised For Symphony, Report Shows

Orchestra Support Urged, With Fund Far Short of $100,000 Goal.

The National Symphony Orchestra Association's campaign for next season's sustaining fund has raised a total of $55,000, it was revealed today at a luncheon attended by campaign leaders in the Carlton Hotel.

Although members of the several committees reported many new contributions turned in last week, the campaign is still far short of its $100,000 goal, and chairmen expressed considerable pessimism over the future of the orchestra. Failure to obtain the amount estimated as necessary by so wide a margin would affect, it was felt, not only concerts this summer, but next winter's season as well.

Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, one of the campaign chairmen, speaking on the situation, remarked:

"Many persons are taking the orchestra too much for granted. These people, noting the artistic success of the orchestra, the acclaim it has received abroad, and the size of its local audiences feel that the orchestra no longer needs their help. They are entirely wrong, for if the orchestra was worth starting, and has justified the faith of those inaugurating the orchestra, it is certainly worth continuing, especially so, now that it has reached such enviable artistic standards.

"The amount now in hand is not enough to carry the orchestra through next season," Mrs. Howe continued. "Rather than curtail its activities and go backward it would be wiser to discontinue it. That is exactly what we face now.

"If all those who have supported us during the past five years would come forward now, and do what they can, we would be safe for another season.

"We are in grave danger, and we may as well face it."

Campaign workers are planning to continue their efforts to obtain sufficient funds to carry the orchestra through next year. Another report luncheon has been announced for next Monday.

he thought it would favor the Kansan strongly.

Hamilton told newspapermen he believed Landon would go into the convention with a majority of New England first choice votes, with Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, second.

He predicted the Kansas Governor would have "the larger share of the Southern delegates if public sentiment is allowed to predominate."

Gov. Buck, who was accompanied here by Colladay, planned to leave tonight for his home.

Borah Files in Oregon.

Salem, Oreg., March 30 (AP).—Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, placed his name today on the May 15 Oregon primary ballot for the preferential vote for the Republican nomination for President. His filing was brought to Salem today by Col. Thomas R. Hamer, of Portland. If no other candidate enters, Oregon Republicans will choose between Borah and an uninstructed delegation.

Oklahoma Democrats Meet.

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 30 (AP).—Oklahoma's Democratic delegates to the national convention in Philadelphia were instructed today to cast their 22 votes for Roosevelt for President and Garner for Vice President.

Scott Ferris was re-elected national committeeman, and Mrs. John G. Catlett, of Tulsa, was elected national committeewoman by the State convention.

A platform indorsing the Roosevelt Administration was adopted but only after a bitter floor fight over a proposed initiative old-age pension measure backed by Gov. E. W. Moreland.

The convention finally went on record as backing the proposal.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, announced yesterday he would leave the Capital Saturday night for his second invasion of the Middle West to campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination.

The Idaho Senator said he would speak first in Milwaukee next Monday night and follow up with two or three speeches in Illinois.

The Wisconsin primary, in which Borah is facing a slate of uninstructed delegates, comes the day after his speech in Milwaukee.

The Republican National Committee accused the New Deal yesterday of being the sponsor of farm communities which are "Communistic in conception."

"President Roosevelt's Resettlement Administration," the committee said in a statement, "is establishing in West Virginia and other States communal farms which follow the Russian pattern, in that each member of the community will work on co-operative projects and share in the proceeds.

"A community farm just outside of Charleston, W. Va., supplies the latest example of what these projects will be.

"They call this community Red House."

The Government, the statement said, charged off $1,000,000 on its books for this community in which 153 families who formerly were on relief are living. The "model" homes, it said, already are "showing cracked walls;" the land which was bought by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration at $29 an acre is found to be "very much worn out" and the "homesteaders exist At a minimum subsistence level."

Work Held Finished.

Committee sources contended it was ending its examination of telegrams because the committee's work was about done, not because of the numerous protests. Committee members have argued throughout the controversy that their activities were amply sustained by law and Senatorial precedent.

The Hearst papers' editorial warning that Administration leaders were leading a subservient Congress into a dictatorship, brought from Minton an assertion that:

"The dictatorship we have to fear in this country is that of a purse-proud, insolent, arrogant, bulldozing, newspaper publisher like William Randolph Hearst.

During the day, Minton made public an indignant letter to Dudley Field Malone challenging his right to "lecture" him on his duties as a Senator. Malone had wired the committee protesting "blanket seizure of confidential telegrams of citizens not even remotely connected with the inquiry."

"Minton Assures" Malone.

Minton replied that "when we reach the point in this country where there is nobody left but you and William Randolph Hearst to defend our liberties, we had better give the country back to the Indians."

It was estimated that the committee's investigators examined some 5,000,000 telegrams, taken by subpena from the files of the Western Union & Postal Telegraph companies. Critics have contended this constituted unreasonable search and seizure in violation of the Fourth Amendment.

Silas Strawn, acting for his law firm, Winston, Strawn & Shaw, of Chicago, recently obtained an injunction in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia restraining the Western Union from delivering telegrams of the firm then under committee subpena.

Malone Issues Challenge.

New York, March 30 (AP).—Attorney Dudley Field Malone, in a telegram today to Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, said it would be better for "the country to go back to the Indians, as you suggest, than to have our Government longer controlled by minds and manners like yours."

Malone's telegram in reply follows:

"I gladly accept your challenge. I learned from the press, the New York Times and New York Herald-Tribune, and not from the Hearst papers, that the personal and private telegrams of Mrs. Henry Caraway, president of the Women's National Republican Club of New York, and those of other members have been seized by the Black committee, and also the private telegrams of Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State under President Wilson, and, of course, the private telegram of W. R. Hearst, giving instructions to his manager, Mr. White, about editorial policy. I could only be impertinent to you as you suggest if you were a superior, which, obviously, you are not; but I shall continue to comment on your atrocious vulgarity in your methods of discussing a grave public issue. Again you are mistaken. Millions of people in the United States besides W. R. Hearst and myself will fight you and the Black committee's affront to invade the private affairs of citizens. It would be better to have the country go back to the Indians, as you suggest, than to have our Government longer controlled by minds and manners like yours. And now I challenge you to debate with me at any time, for any public charity, the issues raised by the lawless conduct of you and the Black committee."

'Numbers' Slayer Sought Here

to Washington. Gaither, police said, was also known as "White." It was hinted that he was planning to "muscle in" on the local "numbers" racket.

The letter was postmarked in Cleveland and bore an address in the 800 block of Thirteenth street northwest. The contents allegedly requested payment of a Cleveland hotel bill. Gaither was known to have been in Cleveland a few weeks before the letter was mailed.

Gaither's possible connections in other cities were indicated by other papers and cards found in his pockets. Some of these papers bore names, telephone numbers and addresses in New York and Atlantic City, as well as Baltimore and Washington.

At the time of his murder, Gaither was under $10,000 bond, awaiting trial as a central figure in Baltimore's intensive probe of the "numbers" racket. It was this fact that puzzled authorities.

"If he had been a witness instead of a defendant, there might have been a reason for the murder," said Lieut. Fihelly.

But as Lieut. George M. Little, chief of the local vice squad, pointed out yesterday, this newest underworld slaying is just a sample of what can happen as long as "numbers" activities are allowed to increase.

"It is too bad they have to wait until someone is killed in order to do something," Little declared. "If something isn't done soon to stop this vicious racket, there is going to be more violence."

And in the center of all this, Washington had another taste of the racket's far-reaching possibilities yesterday. A colored man, identified as Harry Wells, 30, and known to police as "Weak Knees," was held in bond of $1,500 when arraigned in Police Court on charges of robbing two self-styled "numbers" runners.

Hardly had Wells been accused when a police investigator told reporters.

"Don't print too much of this because then we'll only have another shooting to investigate. There's been some harsh language over this case already."

The self-styled "numbers" runners told police they were held up at Seventh street and Rhode Island avenue northwest March 24 and robbed of $623. They said they were en route to a local "numbers" headquarters to turn in receipts. Location of the headquarters was not disclosed.

But, according to members of Lieut. Little's squad, only so-called petty operators establish quarters within the city limits. The "big shots" conduct their affairs from headquarters beyond the District line, police say.

Only when police can "apply the heat"—as the underworld terms it—and receive support from District laws will the city be rid of the "numbers" game and its crime-breeding affects, Lieut. Little said.

And until such a time, it is up to the general public. When Washingtonians refuse to pour fabulous sums into the hands of thriving racketeers, the "numbers" will die a natural death.

Corps of bet collectors invade Government buildings, apartment houses and even private homes to solicit players. They have regular street corners to "do business." And citizens even seek them out to place wagers.

Three classes of operators form the "numbers" racket. First, the "big-shot" or backer. He gets the money. Then the "writer," with whom the player deals. He gets 5 per cent of all collections. And finally the "runner." He receives 30 per cent of all he collects from the "writer" and sees that the money reaches the "boss."

$1,000,000,000 Flood Control Bill Is Forecast

Projects in Members' Own States May Result in Lengthy Battle.

By the Associated Press.

A concerted rush by Senators and Representatives to include their own projects in the $300,000,000 flood control bill being drafted by the Senate Commerce Committee yesterday brought a prediction from its chairman, Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, that it would be swollen into a $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 measure.

By nightfall the committee tentatively had accepted enough to swell the bill to about $385,000,000. The new items included, for the most part projects lifted out of the measure already passed by the House.

The prospect of a prolonged battle over the legislation was heightened by a warning from Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, majority leader, that he would oppose it as now written because it discriminated in favor of Eastern States.

Later, he told reporters, Army engineers would submit another report to the committee "greatly liberalizing" their original recommendations for projects, particularly in Arkansas. He has asked the committee to restore the $300,000,000 bill to its $750,000,000 size as passed by the House last session. Then it contained many projects for the House last session. Then it contained many projects for the Mississippi Valley.

Other flood-control developments during the day included:

The House Rules Committee approved a rule giving right of way to a measure which would authorize the Reconstruction Corporation to make loans totaling $25,000,000 for rehabilitation and reconstruction in flood areas on security "to reasonably assure repayment" instead of "upon sufficient security" as at present.

Senator Robinson told the Commerce Committee in executive session that "disasters, which from time to time during the last 50 years, have brought ruin to large portions of the Mississippi Valley" are certain to occur again unless flood-control work is pushed on the Mississippi River system.

"The President has views on the subject," he said. "He believes that flood control is inseparable from an economic standpoint with forms of land misuse, including erosion, reforestation, water, storage, irrigation and drainage.

"All the necessary works cannot be planned and executed within a single year and it will not be necessary now to attempt to provide the funds which will be required beyond the fiscal year 1937.

"No plan which seeks to eliminate the majority of the projects approved and adopted by the House Flood Control Committee could have promise of enactment."

Robinson called attention to the omission of the Arkansas and White River reservoir projects, estimated to cost above $200,000,000, in the new bill, and said it called for only one flood control project in Arkansas, a State often hit by floods.

Among others who urged inclusion of projects in their States were Senators George (Democrat), of Georgia; Russell (Democrat), of Georgia; Capper (Republican), of Kansas; Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts; Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, and Bilbo (Democrat), Mississippi, and Representatives Beiter (Democrat), New York; Ferguson (Democrat), Oklahoma, and Kopplemann (Democrat), Connecticut.

Chairman Copeland said that only the Merrimac River project in New Hampshire and Massachusetts, estimated to cost $7,725,000, was approved by the committee yesterday.

"I fear, however," Copeland said, "that before we get through the bill may contain authorizations for from one-half to a billion dollars. The appropriations, of course, would be extended over a period of years, depending on the selection of projects for actual work by the Army engineers."

The committee today will consider whether the Federal Government should pay the entire cost of each project, or only actual construction costs.

Copeland said Army engineers believe they can work out a formula under which the Federal Government would pay all construction costs while the States and municipalities would pay for the land and damages.

Truckers Call Rail 'Pick-Up' Plan Monopoly

I. C. C. Asked to Halt Free Delivery System, to Go Into Effect Tomorrow

By the Associated Press.

Assailing what they termed an effort by railroads to create a "transportation monopoly," Eastern trucking interests moved yesterday to block a proposal of rail lines in the territory to establish free-pickup-and-delivery service.

At a hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission, trucking spokesmen charged that the proposed service would be discriminatory, would be rendered below cost, and would lead to "cut-throat competition."

They particularly condemned the railroad proposal to make allowances of 3 cents per 100 pounds to shippers and consigners performing their own pickup or delivery service.

Term Proposal a Rebate.

This, the truck representatives argued, would be, in effect, a rebate.

The service was scheduled to go into effect in the Eastern and New England territory tomorrow, and the commission was expected to reach a decision by then.

Similar services have been instituted by Western and Southwestern roads, and in those cases the commission declined to act on protests by trucking interests.

At the hearing yesterday C. E. Cotterill represented the New York Express Owners Association and J. N. Beall appeared as an attorney for the American Trucking Associations, Inc.

The railroads were accused, meanwhile, by George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executive Association, with having increased returns to owners while employers' share of revenues declined.

He asked a House Interstate Commerce sub-committee to approve the Crosser (Democrat), Ohio, bill requiring the Inetrstate Commerce Commission to pas supon consolidations and similar economies as they affect labor.

Harrison told the committee the portion of rail revenues going to the owners jumped 126 per cent from 1930 to 1933, whereas the portion going to rail employes declined 24 per cent.

"The records show," he said, "the workers have constantly produced more revenue for their employers. I call your attention to this because, later on, you will be told the railroads have more people than they need and ought to consolidate and throw them into the breadlines."

Scoring what he said was unwise railroad financing, Harrison argued that profits should have been used more for retiring outstanding obligations, but that instead, in 1930 for instance, $600,000,000 was paid in dividends, and only $82,000,000 applied on debts.

Supreme Court Denies Appeal Of Gypsy King

Tene Bimbo Convicted of Fleecing Teller in Changing Bills.

The United States won its victory over Tene Bimbo, self-styled "king of the gypsies," yesterday.

Scene of the triumph was the stately chamber of the United States Supreme Court, where the nine black-robed justices denied the gypsy's appeal from a two to eight year sentence for grand larceny, following his conviction for taking $130 from a Washington bank teller in an exchange of some $50 bills for smaller ones.

In denying Bimbo's appeal, the Supreme Court refused to interfere with the decision of the United States Court of Appeals, which last February 10 affirmed the sentence of the District Supreme Court.

Lawyers for Bimbo contended improper testimony had been allowed for the Government in disputing his alibi that he was in New York City June 13, 1933, the day of the alleged fleecing.

Bimbo, they said, was attending some sort of religious ceremony at the time.

The Government said the facile gypsy entered the Woodridge-Landon Savings and Commercial Bank here, presented eight $50 bills and asked for change.

When the bank teller handed him 40 $10 bills, Bimbo spoke English "very poorly," and shook his head. At length the teller gave him $250 in $5 bills, and $150 in $1 bills.

Bimbo went away whistling, and later the teller was said to have discovered that 13 of the $10 bills, which he recounted, were missing. The gypsy was arrested June 3, 1934, in Detroit and returned to Washington.

publications treating lightly, or what they deem slurringly, incidents involving Persia or Persians.

In each case Secretary Hull has patiently explained that the Government in this country does not have the power to throttle the freedom of the press, and that while the best tradition of the American press is to encourage friendly international relations, the writers are free to say whatever they think.

In Teheran, Iranian capital, where freedom of the press is unheard of, this seems a flimsy alibi, according to informed sources. The Persian government takes very much to heart the sometime flippant statements in the American press, interpreting them as official United States attitudes.

So last night Iranian officials in Washington, New York and Chicago dined out with hearts not quite so light as heretofore, while the preliminaries to bag-packing and ticket-buying were begun.

Hossein Ghods, second secretary here, and chief since Djalal left for Teheran last fall, informed the State Department of the action last Saturday. Ghods, author of 35 novels, complained of several instances of alleged press discourtesy, not necessarily connected with the Elkton occasion.

Relations will continue through the American diplomatic mission in Teheran, and definitely will not be concluded, official sources indicated.

A hint of the strained situation came two weeks ago, when a reception scheduled by Ghods in honor of the fifty-ninth birthday of the Shah was canceled with what is known as a "significant excuse."

The Shah, a son of a master-of-ceremonies for a previous Shah, is known to have objected in 1926 to articles in the British press describing his rise from his youthful hostlership through the ranks, until he was entrusted with a diplomatic mission in 1912, to fight as a Turkish colonel in the Turkish ranks against Bulgaria. Finding this dull, he left for Paris, where he spent $150,000. Later he was recalled to Teheran.

tax on all transactions—in favor of one suggested by Sheridan Downey, Townsend's counsel.

The Downey plan, McGroarty said, would involve the issuance of "billions of dollars worth of additional tax-exempt bonds in lieu of the transactions tax."

Downey said yesterday he would issue a statement for release tomorrow morning outlining an important reorganization of the Townsend organization.

The House investigating committee will meet in executive session today and plan for a public session to be held Wednesday morning in the caucus room of the old House office Building. Clements again will be on the witness stand.

Dr. Townsend was in Baltimore yesterday and said he planned to remain there until summoned before the committee.

Sen. Copeland Censures City's Health System

'I Intend to Make a Row' He Tells Negros in Talk On Conditions.

Sever censure of a health system in the Nation's Capital which, during a period of years, has developed an exceptoinally high mortality rate from tuberculosis, and has created such institutoins as the National Trainnig School for Girls, was given last night by Senator Royal S. Copeland at the Metropolitan Baptist Church at a meeting in celebration of National Negro Health Week, under the auspices of the church usher and auxiliary board. The speaker was introduced by Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools.

"I visited the Natoinal Training School for Girls recently after a long residence here without knowledge of its existence," he said. "I found there cell dormitories above the first floor, with wooden doors and with an automatic locking device, so that the doors could only be opened by the throwing of a switch. Should a fire break out in the neighborhood of that switch one night, every one of the 71 inmates of these cells would, of necessity, be burned to death.

"There, in the National Training School, in the Nation's Capital, I found this sort of training—one enameled bath tub, with more than a square yard of enamel worn from its surface, for 40 Negro girls, who have to heat wate rin a potato boiler and carry it to the bath should they desire to use it. I found, no wonder, that 60 per cent of the inmates have died of tuberculosis, in this school maintained by the Federal Government.

"Now that I know of these conditions, I intend to make a row. We might as well close the school as make slaves and prisoners without schooling, of these poor young women, victims of maladjustment in society." Senator Copeland told o fthe work of Nathan Straus, in New York, which resulted in reduction of a 25 per cent infant mortality to 5 per cent, and indicated the 50 per cent mortality rate among colored infants here as a scandal upon the agencies which neglect to provide means tao prevent it.

Other speakers were Dr. Algernon B. Jackson, E. Otho Peters, Dr. Peter Bethea, Dr. C. Herbert Marshall and Dr. E. C. Smith. Dr. Winston C. Willoughby was master of ceremonies.

Post-Fox Film of Washington Receives 'Cutting Room' Polish

Producer Writes From New York as Local Picture Is Given Final Touches Indicate City Will Be Proud of Featured Players.

From the "cutting rooms" in New York, where final laboratory touches are being put to the completed film, "It Happened in Washington," come complimentary reports of the entertaining excellence of this all-local movie, which will have its premiere Saturday at Loew's Palace Theater.

Irving Yates, who produced this high school film story for The Post and the local Loew Theaters, writes that "I really believe Washington audiences, as well as those talented boys and girls who appear in the film, will be surprised by the entertaining merit of this all-talking picture. It will be as interesting as it will be proud of the talents of those youngsters who are featured."

The completed film should arrive here any day, and it will be previewed for Senator Henry F. Ashurst, who plays the only adult role, and some of his colleagues. Leonard eMenna, the director, is expected to arrive today to help arrange a "Hollywood premiere" for its Saturday, opening at the Palace. orothy Ramspeck and James Pendergrast, two Western High School students who have the leading roles, and the other high school boys and girls who are featured will be guests of honor, as will many Senatorial colleagues of Senator Ashurst.

"It Happened in Washington" will be shown as a special added attraction at the Palace, together with the full-length feature, "The Bohemian Girl," with Laurel and Hardy.

Scott Board Denies Rural Schools Fund

Gate City, Va., March 30 (AP).—The Scott oCunty board of supervisors declined by unanimous vote to make any appropriation for the county schools at a special meeting here today.

This action upheld a recent announcement of the board that funds in addition to the current budget would not be appropriated this term despite the plea of the school officials that this would mean the wtihdrawal of buses from operation.

M. R. Stallard, chairman of the supervisors, said another meeting would be held April 7 to consider the county budget and that in the meantime preparations were to be made to raise the general county tax levy sufficiently to include funds for operation of the schools after next July 1.

The supervisors charged at a recent session that the school board had failed to operate economically and demanded certain changes before authorizing further appropriations.

The simple mechanical details of cigarette manufacture are of surprising importance. Upon them depend the physical properties of the cigarette, such as weight, size, firmness, moisture-holding properties, uniformity of fill, uniformity of product—all of which have a far-reaching effect on the character of its combustion and the constituents of its smoke.

In the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes all of these properties have been standardized with care for the perfection of A LIGHT SMOKE.

BerryRenamed Co-ordinator By Roosevelt

By the United Press.

Miami, Fla., March 30.—President Roosevelt tonight reappointed Maj. George L. Berry co-ordinator for industrial co-operation, empowering him to continue his work in seeking greater avenues of employment for the Nation's jobless.

The appointment, effective April 1, permits Berry to carry on his work for another year.

The designation was made in an Executive order from the yacht Potomac, Mr. Roosevelt's floating White House. The order was flown to temporary White House offices at the Miami Biltmore here.

The order defining Berry's duties read:

"To arrange for and supervise, subject to the direction of the President, conferences of representatives of industry, investors, labor and consumers for consideration of means of supplementing the Government's efforts by providing employment for the greatest number of employable persons and of improving and maintaining industrial, commercial and labor standards as they affect employment, and to submit reports and recommendations to the President with respect thereto."

Meanwhile, from warm Bahama waters, where President Roosevelt is vacationing aboard the yacht Potomac with a few close personal friends, came the following messages addressed to Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre at Miami:

"The President on Potomac, Monghan, Dale, arrived Cat Cay 11:40 this morning."

From the President for McIntyre:

"After pleasant run last night we are anchored off Little San Salvador, where we will fish and swim this afternoon. Leaving tonight and expect arrive Nassau about 10 a. m. tomorrow morning."

In a special message, Mr. Roosevelt added that on arrival in Nassau tomorrow he will greet Sir Bede and Lady Clifford. Sir Bede is Governor General of the Bahamas. With members of the White House Correspondents Association, they will be luncheon guests aboard the Potomas in Nassau harbor. The party will include James W. Gerard and his wife. Gerard is the former Ambassador to Germany.

In his communication to McIntyre, the President announced he had accepted the resignation of Judge Samuel Alschuler, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit at Chicago.

aggression;" and, further, will instruct the general staff "to enter into contact with a view to arranging technical conditions" during such consultations.)

As the arrangements were pending, the British awaited announcement from Chancellor Hitler of his new peace suggestions to establish a new European security pact. Officials said there has been no indication Der Fuehrer's reply will be delayed longer than tomorrow, the date the German plan is expected.

May Call New Conference.

After receipt of the German proposals, the British will advise Italy, France and Belgium of their content and a new four-power conference—consisting of the remaining Locarno members—may be called.

These sources pointed out, however, that the general staff conferences must be held regardless of the German suggestions, because of the four-power Locarno agreement.

(Italy, presumably, would not participate in the discussions because the Fascist government has not yet accepted Locarno proposals.)

Government quarters appeared pessimistic that Hitler's answer or counter-proposals would be satisfactory to either France or Belgium.

Hitler's Stand Unknown.

Berlin, March 30 (AP).—Nobody but Adolf Hitler himself knew tonight what his detailed reply to Great Britain in the Locarno crisis tomorrow would be—a reply he promised would have "positive" proposals for peace.

Political sources intimated the Hitler proposals would "astound the world," but whether he would aid Great Britain's efforts for a peaceful solution of the European tangle by a conciliatory gesture only Der Fuehrer himself knew.

Backing Hitler was an overwhelming indorsement by his people. An official announcement of the result of yesterday's Reichstag election—in reality a plebiscite upon approval of Der Fuehrer's foreign policy—said he won 99 per cent of the votes.

Of the 44,954,937 ballots, 44,441,911 were for Hitler, while 543,026 were either "no" or invalid.

When Hitler rejected the four-power Locarno proposals for settlement of the Rhineland question last week he promised Great Britain that he would submit "positive" proposals tomorrow.

Although there was no intimation of the nature of the counter-proposals Der Fuehrer will make, many observers believed he might be more unyielding than ever because of the solidness of the vote for him yesterday.

Story of Attack Told on Stand By Vera Stretz

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 30.—Vera Stretz sobbed in sordid detail late today a story of brutal assault upon her by Dr. Fritz Gebhardt and of how she repulsed his unnatural advances with four pistol bullets.

The German industrialist she once loved, she testified amid tears, lured her to his hotel room the night of last November 11 on the pretext that he was ill and wanted her to minister to him as she had done before. She had been abed when he phoned her. She threw a coat over her cerise nightgown and went to his room, two floors above her own in the Beekman Towers Hotel.

Gebhardt seized her.

"He was swearing, cursing," the blonde former stenographer testified under the questioning of her attorney, Samuel S. Leibowitz.

"Tell us exactly what transpired," Leibowitz prompted.

Remembered Gun.

"He said, 'you'll do everything I want you to.' I was horrified. I said, 'God, no; never.' I remembered the gun and I took it in my hand.

"He said, 'you damned ——, I'll kill you.' He grabbed my hand and pulled me toward him and I pulled away from him and that's when the gun went off. He fell on the bed and staggered up again and I shot him again."

Q. How many times did you shoot?

A. I don't know.

Leibowitz then had her testify she did not intend to pull the trigger the first time she shot, that she did not know what she was doing, and related her actions up to the time the police arrived and found her.

Then he turned her over for cross-examination, but Miles M. O'Brien, assistant district attorney, had time for only a few perfunctory questions before court adjourned until tomorrow.

Before the climax of the testimony by which Vera hopes to escape a murder conviction on a plea of self-defense, Leibowitz brought out that she had intended to break off her intimate relationship with her employer-lover because he would not tell his wife, Mrs. Thea Gebhardt, in Germany, about it.

The ailment for which she had treated Gebhardt was a pain in the side. The usual ministration was the application of a heating pad.

When Gebhardt telephoned for her the night of the slaying "I put on a swagger coat over my gown and a pair of shoes," she said.

Q. Did the coat have any pockets or any place where a person might put a pistol?

A. No.

Hastens to Room.

She hastened to his room. He opened the door for her. He wore an old-fashioned nightshirt. She had him get back into bed and drew a blanket over him.

"I went to the bureau drawer at the foot of the bed to get an electric pad. I said, 'Fritz, I will fix that — the pain — immediately.' I opened the top drawer to get the pad——"

"Did you notice any objects in the top drawer?" interrupted Leibowitz.

"Yes, I noticed several things—a gun, handkerchiefs, socks, shirts and other laundry."

"Did you see Fritz get up out of bed?" Leibowitz asked.

"I don't know."

"What was the next thing you knew?"

"He had caught my elbow from behind. He kissed my neck. I turned around in surprise and asked him what he meant by all this. He said, 'I am not really sick. I just wanted to see if you would still come when I called.'

"I said, 'of course I would come if you are lying here sick and needed me, but if you don't need me I am going.' He said, 'you are not going, you are going to stay here as long as I want you to stay,' and he kissed me."

Relief

ganization, we have no direct connection with the administration of relief for the District.

"The immediate situation grows out of the fact that the recent appropriation of Congress for relief purposes in the District for the rest of the fiscal year is sufficient to provide assistance only for the unemployable cases, and for assistance in the form of aid to dependent children as one part of the security program.

"It appears unlikely that there will be any change in this situation unless additional appropriations are made in Congress, or new taxes imposed."

Williams' letter will be used, it was indicated, in an effort to secure an additional emergency relief appropriation from Congress. Although District officials are not hopeful about their chances of securing such an appropriation there was a possibility, they thought, of swapping a tax increase for additional relief funds.

When the Senate sub-committee on appropriations resumed its hearings the Commissioners intend to present a proposal for a 1 cent increase in the gasoline tax to yield $1,000,000, and other taxes to net an additional $500,000, provided these taxes are earmarked in advance for relief purposes. If such a tax proposal wins the support of the Senate, District officials hope Congress may be induced to appropriate funds to relieve the relief crisis that will prevail in the city until the first of the new taxes can be collected.

Mrs. Greenway, who was ill at home, dictated her letter to Hopkins, over the telephone, to a clerk in her office. It read:

"Is it true that there will be tonight 5,000 people cut off the relief rolls in the District of Columbia, and no provision made for them of any kind between April 1 and April 15, when they will draw their first WPA checks—if they have been fortunate enough to be assigned to WPA?

"We ask confirmation of this information which we got through the supervising personnel of the District relief office, because a friend of ours is being cut off on April 1, and has no way to provide food for his family the next 15 days.

"May we have your answer so that, if it is true, we can do our part as citizens to arouse the District to the emergency?"

Welfare Board officials did not believe that many of those cut off relief will be absorbed on the WPA rolls, as efforts are being made to reduce the numbers being aided by the Federal Government.

In announcing that 4,000 "employables" cases would be dropped from direct relief rolls tonight, Street explained that "only if the full $608,000 originally recommended by the District Commissioners" had been appropriated could we have carried the entire load."

With only $350,000 appropriated it was possible to care for only the 4,100 "unemployables" on the rolls and an additional 500 cases affecting dependent children, he said.

Relief checks will be sent out as usual to these families while those who are to be dropped will receive a notice to that effect. Two weeks ago such a notice was sent to all persons on relief. With "rent days" coming, Street predicted "numerous evictions before the week is over."

Publication of a research study of the cases on relief from February 25 to March 5, prepared by Leroy A. Halbert, director of research of the relief division of the Board of Public Welfare, revealed that 5.9 per cent of the 1930 population of the city was receiving relief on March 5.

Bible Condones Righteous War, McSwain Says

Pacifism Is Attaceked by Legislator at Legion Defense Meeting.

Chairman John J. McSwain of the House Military Affairs Committee last night challenged anyone to tell him that Christian soldiers like Robert E. Lee on "Stonewall" Jackson are "frying and sizzling somewhere" because they fought for what they thought was right.

He was making a plea for preparedness before the third annual Americanism and national defense meeting of the District of Columbia American Legion Auxiliary at Gordon Junior High School.

"I have no patience," he shouted, "with those who say that war at any time is un-Christian. No one can show me where righteous war is conducted in the Holy Book. Peace must be achieved some day at the price of blood."

He attacked the "smart alecks" at Princeton who recently formed the Veterans of Future Wars and said the Future Gold Star Mothers were "very presumptuous to think that they would ever be mothers at all."

Capt. Wilbur R. Van Auken, representing the Navy Department, said that a strong navy was an excellent insurance for peace.

Lieut. Col. William E. Brougher, U. S. A., compared pacifists and those who would reform the world with the two little pigs whose houses were blown away by the big bad wlof. The third and wise little pig is the one, he said, who believed in building up our defenses so this country would be ready fo rthe big bad wolf.

Mrs. Gertrude R. Emery, chairman of the national Americanism committee of the auxiliary, suggested education in patriotism as the best means of combatting the tendency toward socialism of the youth of today.

Play Will Be Given By Cornell Groups

Departing from the formal type of concert which they have hitherto used on tours, the Cornell Musical Clubs will present a musical comedy, "Oh, What a Night," in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom tomorrow night. The plot, dealing with the predicament of a college club stranded in a small town, permits the vocalists and instrumentalists ample opportunities.

In the course of the play the instrumental section will be heard in Grofe's "On the Trail," Bloom's "Song of the Bayou," selections from Herbert's "Naughty Marietta" and other numbers. The Glee Club will sing traditional Cornell songs, several ballads, and such contemporary items as "Home on the Range" and "Wagon Wheels."

The student leaders of the glee club and instrumental club are Paul Mattice and Samuel Shanaman; the professional directors are Eric Dudley and George L. Coleman. The present tour is being made by 35 members of the glee club and 25 members of the instrumental club.

Cornell alumni in charge of the Washington appearance are Ed Holmes, Edward Hill, Walter G. Distler, president of the Cornell Club of Washington, and Oliver Griswold.

Radio Station Ready to Bounce Waves Off Stratosphere Layer

High-Speed Signals to Be Shot Into Space Every Tenth of a Second for Several Years in Kensington, Md., Experiment.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

One of the most ambitious attempts ever made to explore the outer limits of the stratosphere was inaugurated here last night with granting of a Federal license for a radio station which will broadcast signals so rapidly no ordinary receiver can record them.

The Carnegie Institution, which receives ahe license from the Federal Communications Commission, will establish immediately at Kensington, Md., its stratosphere radio, shooting into space every tenth of a second a signal lasting only one-thousandth of a second.

These radio pulses are the fastest pever attempted. They will be broadcast continuously, night and day, for several years, bumping into the ionized layers of the outer stratosphere many miles from the earth.

Scientists working under Dr. J. A. Fleming, director of the institution, hope to ascertain facts which no stratosphere balloon ever could obtain.

They expect to obtain new facts concerning all radio frequencies—from 1,000 to 31 kilocycles—and to learn conclusively the effects of the 11-year sun spot cycle on wireless broadcasting.

Their equipment was three years in the making. Federal engineers recommended issuance of the license after ascertaining that the ultra-brief signals could have no possible effect on commercial or amateur broadcasting.

The commission simultaneously issued to the Craft Laboratory of Harvard University a license fr experimental testing of similar apparatus which will be used in correlated efforts to measure the heights of the ionized layers, through which no radio signal apparently can penetrate.

The Craft Laboratory's machinery will be shipped t Ak-Birlak, Siberia, where an eclipse of the sun next June can be observed under peculiarly favorable circumstances.

The commission's scientists said the licenses were the first of their kind ever granted and predicted that the resulting experiments will be of inestimable value to several branches of science. If the observations are successful, it was said they may even result in multiplication of the knottiest problems facing the Government.

Another Sinking Spell.

The franc has had another sinking spell, thus increasing the odds against maintenance of the present gold parity of France's currency. The pressure to devalue originates, as has been often pointed out, from the unsatisfactory state of domestic finances. And, of course, every time Europe is convulsed by a new war scare the public distrust is enhanced and a capital flight ensues.

Last month the French Treasury borrowed £40,000,000 in London and a few days ago the government obtained permission to increase short-term borrowings at the Bank of France to the extent of 6,000,000,000 francs. These evidences of lack of public support for long-term government issues inevitably add to the anxiety arising from present uneasy Franco-German relations.

The resulting decline in the value of the franc has brought it down to a point at which gold exports to the United States are again in prospect. The outflow may be checked by the sharp rise in the Bank of France discount rate at the end of the week. But such measures, as well as the support to franc exchange afforded by the recent sterling loan and the British stabilization fund, are merely temporary expedients. They are not sufficient to overcome the essential weaknesses that cause the recurrent flights of French capital. However, with the campaign for the French national elections now in progress, it is believed that strenuous efforts will be made to protect the franc until the new Parliament convenes.

Devaluation of the franc, or the outbreak of war, which would inevitably entail devaluation, are contingencies that have to be taken into account whenever the question of an international stabilization agreement is mooted. While the internal and external disturbances which jeopardize the franc are not the only obstacles to such an agreement, they increase the reluctance of the British to take any action that would compel them to maintain sterling at a fixed rate in terms of gold. The tentative suggestions of our Government looking toward exchange stabilization are likely to meet with an indifferent reception, therefore, until Europe breathes a more peaceful atmosphere.

Petticoats And Peace.

As long as women stayed on pedestals there was no danger that their petticoats would drag in the dirt. But when they stepped down, and into comfortable shoes, all unnecessary encumbrances went to the attic, with none but a few sentimentalists to mourn their passing.

It is extremely difficult to tell which came first—customs or costumes. Did the Victorian mince and flutter as a result of her ribbons and laces, or were they but an outward sign of her "inward daintiness"? Was the post-war flapper actually freed by the simple act of donning berets and brogans, or did she create a demand for them only after finding they were better suited to her new freedom? Certainly the veiled hat and tan duster for those first perilous automobile trips were utilitarian rather than chic. Yet, if it's strictly a matter of choice, why didn't the Gibson Girl pick a better hat for bicycling than a straight sailor, which responded to every breeze with kitelike abandon?

In an age which boasts a minimum of fashion inhibitions it is practically impossible to distinguish trend from taste. Woman, encroaching more and more on what have hitherto been regarded as purely masculine precincts and disdaining discriminatory legislation, is, on the other hand, emphasizing her femininity as blatantly as ever. Flowers, feathers, the swish of silk—all these outdated items are being reinstated. A glance at any newspaper only serves to heighten the confusion. In the news, women bank directors, symphony leaders, department store heads; in the ads, intriguing sketches of women in taffeta gowns, picture hats and, of all things, petticoats!

A flash of petticoat beneath a trim skirt is a somewhat narrow margin on which to base any conclusion. But fifty million petticoats can scarcely rustle to no purpose. Are women, though proud of their professional prowess, nevertheless rebelling against the austerity demanded by the business world as a sign of efficiency? Does an emphatic contrast between their part in the Machine Age and their decorative instinct appeal to an inexplicable feminine perversity? Or does the mode merely reveal a subconscious desire to recapture the serenity and certainty of the Victorian era?

A Nation Of Yes-Men.

According to the official tabulation of the German plebiscite only 1 per cent of the qualified electorate abstained from voting, while the number who cast invalid or negative ballots constituted approximately the same percentage of citizens. The 98 per cent affirmative vote for Hitler's policies is consequently described as a marvelous tribute to Der Fuehrer's leadership, and a majestic sign of unshakeable national unity.

In their hearts, however, many Germans must be echoing the criticism of these returns which arises everywhere that free expression of opinion remains. The figures are far too nearly unanimous to be impressive. Even without any other evidence they indicate a controlled election machinery which could have produced a 102 per cent vote for Hitler as readily as the 98 per cent which was turned in. Like all extremists, the Nazis have overplayed their hand. If one of every ten ballots had been cast against him, Hitler would have seemed overwhelmingly strong. But the almost complete absence of opposition merely discredits the "election" procedure.

And if it is true that 98 of every 100 adult Germans approve everything Hitler has done, or may do, the conclusion standing out above all others is the pitiable condition of contemporary German thought thereby revealed. Such a conclusion is entirely independent of the dictator or any of his policies. It arises primarily from an evidence of standardization, and a consequent lack of independent thinking, which is sure indication of an intellectually sterile community.

All human progress comes from individuals who refuse to accept the majority opinion as infallible. The pioneers in artistic, literary, scientific, commercial or political progress are ever those who refuse to be bound by traditionalism in the field of their interest, and who strive ceaselessly to expand the restricted frontiers with which most men are always content.

Of course this does not mean that all who differ from the majority have something constructive to offer. Many dissenters, of course, are merely misplaced, unbalanced or incompetent. But it does mean that somewhere in some minorities are to be found individuals who combine divine dissatisfaction with heroic power to construct. Such men and women are the real torchbearers of civilization.

It is to foster the development of the rare genius that an intelligent government will endeavor to protect all sorts of dissenting and often absurd groups, from nudists to Townsendites, even though they might destroy society if they became all-powerful. There is always a chance that any minority may have something real to contribute. There is additionally the advantage of demonstrating that the established arrangement is better than the suggested alternative. For it is a poor compliment to any system when its adherents fear to see it confronted with open criticism and suggestion for change.

So intelligent Germans will take little pride in the fact that 99 out of every 100 who voted said "ja" on Sunday. As high a proportion of bleating sheep will follow their leader over a cliff, in blind, unquestioning faith. The Germany that was great had many leaders: Goethe, Schiller and Thomas Mann; Duerer, Beethoven and Wagner; Kant, Hegle and Fichte; Rathenau, Harden and Einstein. Men like these were not produced by thinking the way a dictator ordered them to think.

Our Trade With Japan.

Last December Japanese cotton goods manufacturers voluntarily agreed to limit their exports to the United States to "moderate levels," in response to American complaints of increasing pressure of Japanese competition. The National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, however, maintains that the agreement "falls far short of what is desirable" and is urging the Tariff Commission to take action.

In a petition presented to the Senate by Senator Walsh, and referred to the Committee on Finance, the association asserts that Japanese importations are an "increasing threat," citing as evidence information supplied by the Cotton Textile Institute. It appears that the volume of cotton piece goods imported in January was more than double the total for January, 1935, and that shipments were then coming in at the rate of 80,000,000 square yards per annum. As the bulk of these receipts consist of bleached goods used in making handkerchiefs and underwear, the competition offered to competing domestic products, estimated at only 150,000,000 yards, is exceptionally severe.

While it would be a mistake to minimize the importance of this showing, it would also be stupid to magnify the danger to our domestic industries from the importation of bleached goods that constitute a negligible proportion of our total domestic output of cotton goods. No doubt the American cotton industry is unfairly handicapped in a limited production field by Japan's abnormally low labor costs and the severe depreciation of the yen. However, localized relief can be obtained without resort to punitive tariffs or other prohibitions that might disturb friendly trading relations and impose heavy costs upon American industry in the long run.

Despite constant complaints of the growing menace of Japanese competition, the United States sells more to Japan than it imports from that country. Last year, for example, the trade balance was $50,000,000 in our favor, as contrasted with an unfavorable balance of $173,000,000 in 1929 and of $50,000,000 in 1931. Furthermore, Japan is today the chief export market for American cotton and it is well to remember that other sources of supply are open to Japanese manufacturers. The industrial expansion of that country has likewise created demands for other American raw materials which have enabled us to recover a good part of the export trade lost since the boom era.

After making a detailed analysis the United States Tariff Commission concluded that most of our imports from Japan are either not produced in the United States or else are not directly competitive. Slightly over 8 per cent of all imports in 1934 were classified as "substantially competitive." The situation cannot have changed greatly since that time. It would be extremely shortsighted, therefore, needlessly to antagonize a good customer by shutting out a small volume of cotton goods that threaten a restricted section of American industry, especially if needed relief can be obtained by voluntary action. If the present gentleman's agreement is not satisfactory, it could be made effective by fixing more precise limits to the kinds and amounts of cotton cloth imported.

Under present conditions, there is no possibility of negotiating with Japan a reciprocal tariff agreement that would reduce barriers to free interchange of goods. But we can at least adjust differences with a minimum of friction and with the least possible disruption of a trade that is predominantly complementary, rather than competitive, and therefore extremely profitable to both countries.

Sign Of Weakness.

The Italian bombing of Harar was almost certainly a military blunder, calculated to harden the stubborn Ethiopian resistance to a merciless invader. But it may yet become something worse as a precedent in what Mussolini calls civilized warfare.

For months now, Italy—itself a vast storehouse of ancient and medieval learning and art—has stressed the virtues of its own culture and the barbarism of Ethiopia. Yet, now Italy fliers must blast the old Coptic Cathedral, the Catholic Church and the Mohammedan Mosque of Ethiopia's second city, the residence of 40,000 nonmilitary inhabitants.

All winter long, Italian communiques have claimed successes for Italian troops; yet now—with the rainy season at hand, it is deemed necessary to indulge in an act of sheer terrorism and civilian slaughter. For six months Mussolini's mechanized armies have pursued what their master insists is a war for the ultimate civilization of primitive Abyssinia. It is an indication of failure in fair combat that they now prefer to strike blows at those unable to hit back.

In this air-assault, the Duce has provided potential European enemies with an example perilous to the religious and artistic treasures of his own country. He has weakened confidence in assertions of his armies' progress. And he has rendered farcical his argument that the chief motive of the Ethiopian expedition is the civilizing of the Ethiopians.

Gymnosophical Stenography.

WANTED—A stenographer, between the ages of 23 and 30, willing to pass winter months in Florida and summer months in New Jersey camp. Apply American Gymnosophical Society.

Apparently this is the answer to every stenographer's dream—taking dictation under Southern skies while sister secretaries are battling snowdrifts in colder climes; pecking away at a typewriter throughout the dog days in a summer camp remote from sweltering pavements. Nothing is said of salary or hours. But, after all, what are they compared to such ideal working conditions

However, before there is a general exodus to the land of palms, leaving behind a path of resignations, all discreet applicants will consult their dictionaries on the meaning of "gymnosophical." The original gymnosophists, besides setting the style of no styles at all for their adherents, also "employed themselves in meditation on the nature of true being and of absorption into the absolute." And that, girls, is a mouthful, whether you use Gregg or Pittman.

Emily Post, as well as all standard secretarial handbooks, fails to take the rules of conduct for any such position into consideration. But it seems certain that any stenographer who accepts a job in the nudist camp of the American Gymnosophical Society will hardly expect more than a bare living.

Another View Of Mexico.

V. F. Calverton in the Living Age.

Revolutionary demagogy flourishes in Mexico not because the Mexican government believes in a working-class revolution, but because it is a weapon against foreign capital . . . and the present Mexican government derives its main strength from the support of the workers, peasants, and small business men, all of whom are violently anti-imperialist, and, therefore, anti-foreign.

But such revolutionary demagogy will never be able to withstand the onslaught of the new American incursion, which, with the new investments, occupations, industries, and projects it will inspire and create, will make over the country in the American image . . . In all likelihood, the revolutionary jargon will disappear as rapidly as it arose, for it has no root in economic reality.

A Virginian On Old Age.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am inclined to hold the opinion that our people are critical of the Virginia Legislature, recently in session, for its unsympathetic attitude toward old-age pensions. The sheer helplessness of persons composing this group may explain defeat of the bill; however, is it possible to conceive of citizens more pathetic than those bowed by declining years, subject to the many "ills which flesh is heir to" and carrying to their graves the depressing thought that their usefulness is over and they are dependent?

When we consider the fact that only 5 per cent of the people assuming the responsibility of business make a success, the position of the less fortunate should be condoned by those in affluence and political power. Fortune is fickle.

The Federal Government recognizes its obligation to aged dependents and provides the sum of $15 per month to all persons over 65 years of age and dependent, provided the State gives a like amount and complies with further requirements. In 15 States the law is in effect; 10 States have submitted plans and in 18, plans are approved by the Government.

It is a humane law, magnamimous in conception, Christian in application, constructive in legislation, the benefits extending far beyond the person pensioned. Other States receive this flow of gold, which quickly enters into the channels of trade. Virginia, with her prestige, her boasted financial position, her inspiring past history has hesitated; her legislators and others in command appear not to appreciate the benefits to accrue—the happiness that would be manifest.

"An American Cheka?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dr. Hugh S. Magill, president of the American Federation of Investors, has issued a booklet "From Democracy to Dictatorship," in which he asks the question "Is there in our country today an American Cheka?" He cites in reply to his own question the almost unbelievable facts about the Black inquisition committee of the Senate, which "drunk with power would harass, annoy and intimidate any citizen who would influence public sentiment in opposition to New Deal schemes."

Since Dr. Magill's booklet came off the presses there have been further revelations of the sinister workings of Black's infamous Cheka or American AGPU. In brazen violation of the fourth amendment to the Constitution that the "right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated," some 14,000,000 private telegrams have been seized and pawed over by Paul Prys and Peeping Toms. Even messages between husbands and wives have not been sacred from our Cheka snoopers. The great idea is to fish and fish until perchance you catch a fish, and to intimidate and terrorize all anti-New Dealers, and perhaps if they can not find something in your own record to embarrass you or your correspondents to find something that will lead somewhere to someone more easy to hook and put in the Black frying pan.

Such Black doings show that tyrannic despotism can happen here—even in our alleged land of the free and home of the brave. I have no doubt that unless the Senate checks out its freedom-choking Cheka that the next step will be to open letters of citizens as they pass through the post-office, tap their telephone wires, etc.

When I was in Russia during the war I heard of one lazy censor of mails who at 5 p. m. every day red-pencilled every letter he had not had time to read, which meant it was to go into the fire. I am not sure that this could not happen here. Any ruthless violation of private rights can happen under dictatorships such as in Russia, Italy and Germany. Under Franklin Roosevelt we appear to be "on our way" fast from democracy to dictatorship.

The Theater And The Color Line

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I do not know what unfortunate experience in the past may have prompted Mr. James Hodgson and "A. S. L." to write as they did with reference to the theater and the color line, but personally I am very glad that my training and beliefs make it impossible for me to feel that the person who happens to be seated next to me in a game, street car, concert or theater is on that account my social equal.

Indeed, I doubt if I should not feel myself his inferior if I, the privileged, should deny him any legitimate opportunity or pleasure that might be his, merely because I did not like the color of his skin.

JANE EBERHARDT.
Washington, March 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You are to be congratulated upon your publication of letters regarding "The Theater and the Color Line." Your attitude, in granting a hearing to both sides of the question, has been fair, stimulating and thought-provoking. I wish to range my views on the side of those who are attempting to offer light, and not the heat of prejudice to this issue.

The authors of the letters of March 27 spoke warmly, but not wisely. Had they consulted the managers of theaters in large metropolitan areas of our Northern States, they would not have erred so grossly as to the unwisdom of the economics entailed in this venture. However, more important than the economics involved in this issue is the principle, which more than anything else will determine the staying power of our Nation.

I represent a segment of young Negro manhood who feel that if we never attended a downtown theater, the privilege as citizens should exist, notwithstanding. And should we not? Have not the forefathers of my race patriotically given of their loyalty, intelligence, and blood to make the Captial City possible? Had they been derelict in their honor, courage and responsibility during the hours of our national peril, who can gainsay that this nation might not have succumed to a malignant destiny? Fair-minded citizens acknowledge this, and seek to reward this valor and sacrifice, by supporting the letter of our Constitution in giving meaning to Negro citizenship.

A crisis more serious than many frequently alluded to in appraising "what's wrong with our times?" is presently confronting us. It is inherent in this issue. If one danger stands out more than another, it is not so much the menace of communism, as the condescension of democracy itself to give tacit sanction to race and class prejudice and discrimination. This issue of the theater and the color line is Exhibit A. It will profit all of us to give this problem all of the careful and unbiased intelligent attention it deserves. The hour is still propitious.

LESTER BROWN.
Washington, March 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all this noise about opening the local theaters to colored people? Every theater in this city has been open to colored people and always will be. Those writing on this subject in the future should limit their forensic arguments to opening the theaters to all Negroes.

These light-complexioned individuals must have lost that racial pride referred to by A. S. L. when their Nordic forbears put their racial pride on the shelf long enough to share paternity with a person of color.

PRIDELESS.
Washington, March 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: First, I want to add my compliments to those already given for your courage in publishing the letters under the caption of "The Theater and the Color Line," and I hope you will keep your columns open for a full discussion of this vital question. I am glad that the other side was presented in your paper under date of March 27, and the purpose of this letter is to answer one of them.

A. S. L.'s assumption that the authors of the letters favoring the opening of local theater doors to all citizens, regardless of race, were Negroes, is not at all surprising to me. The fact that he did not sign his full name indicates that he fears the scorn of thousands of liberal, decent and self-respecting white persons who would resent his self-appointment as their spokesman. His assumption that Negroes who desire to see a decent play at a theater where white people are present indicates lack of race pride is absurd; equally so is his idea that the theaters would go bankrupt if Negroes are admitted.

I agree that there are not enough Negroes in Washington who have the desire or means to attend all classes of theaters and amusements, but, judging from past experience, there are not enough whites to support one theater offering legitimate plays.

A. S. L. states further that the admission of Negroes to theaters would be an entering wedge to his admission to other public places frequented by white people, and the privilege could not be denied them upon any logical grounds. What are his logical grounds for excluding them from the theaters?

As to the peace and good order of the community, I refer A. S. L. to what happened at the National Theater during the performance of "Porgy and Bess," which a large number of Negroes attended, and "At Home Abroad," at which Negroes were present.

Woman's Progress.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the benefit of "Observer" who seems to have a bad case of the jitters over the so-called encroachment of women in the economic field, kindly grant me space to quiet his fears.

Ever since the woman movement was inaugurated—away back in 1848—men have made the most dire prophecies of the effects that would follow women's emergence from the home. In 1854 when a petition was presented in the New York Legislature asking that married women might possess their own wages and have something to say about the control of their own children, an irate male charged indignantly that women were trying to "set the whole community ablaze with their unhallowed fire."

When resolutions calling for equal educational opportunities for women in high schools and colleges were introduced an objector said, "Here is an attempt to introduce a vast social evil. These resolutions are the first step in the school which seeks to abolish marriage, and behind this picture I see a monster of deformity."

In 1872 Susan B. Anthony exercised what she believed to be her right to vote under the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution. She was arrested, brought to trial and fined $100 for "conspiring against the peace and dignity of these United States." (The State vs. Susan B. Anthony.)

In 1936 it's the same old story: "Let the present tendency continue and there will be little or no home life in the land," etc. Doesn't "Observer" know that the great percentage of American women are in the home doing a better job there than ever because of greatly increased opportunities to intelligently manage a home? As for the women who have neither homes nor husbands, would "Observe" advocate that the economic milestone of their support be again hung about men's necks? That is not the way out of our difficulties.

The Post Impressionist

Bow-Bells And Dingley Dell.

Post Office, Tuesday.

THIS is the 31st of March.

Four score and 20 years ago—

You will have noted, Gentle Reader, that this Column has, now and again, been under compulsion to chide its neighbors, the editorials, for certain sins of omission. We have scolded the guilty writers because they let the Fourth of July pass without eliciting a single scream from Aquila Chrysaetus. We have upbraided them for paying no more attention to the 22d of February than they would have paid had it been our own birthday. And we have been especially severe with them when they carelessly overlooked the centennial of any great literary event.

Now, however, those same editorial writers have annoyed us still more.

There was a slight satisfaction in running down, say, some time in February, the knowledge that the hundredth anniversary of some modern classic would occur, say, some time in March—in withholding the discovery until after the day had gone by unrecorded—and then in jeering at our friends for their reprehensible silence.

But what are we to do when an editorial writer himself takes the first of those three steps, keeps a malicious silence about his course, and springs an appropriate editorial two days in advance of the event—just to spoil the censorious column which he shrewdly guessed we had written and made ready to launch against him?

As long ago as the depths of last winter, The Post-Impressionist, turning the pages of Foster's biography of Dickens, came across the statement that the first number of The Pickwick Papers appeared from the press of Messrs. Chapman & Hall on March 31, 1836. We noted this upon the page of our desk-calendar for March 25, so that we could get together data for a column which would praise the Pickwick, Winkle, Snodgrass & Tupman Co.—and which would reprimand our neighbors for neglecting to celebrate that firm.

We even wrote the column and, with proper prudence, locked it in our miniature desk.

However, one of our colleagues among the editorial writers must have rifled that calendar.

How else can you explain the fact that, on Sunday last—to wit, March 29—The Post led its editorials with an article in praise of Pickwick?

It began:

"One hundred years ago this week, a citizen of London appeared upon her streets, to remain alive and 'going strong' at the end of his initial century."

And what made the injury harder to bear is its quality. It is one of the best editorials we have ever read, among the always admirable editorials of The Post.

What—we repeat—is one to do in such circumstances?

It seems to us that our dignified course is to ignore the editorial and append hereto as much of our appreciation of Samuel Pickwick as remaining space will permit—as if no other mention of his centennial had appeared in this newspaper.

In the matter of style, they are inferior. They have much of the prolixity which characterized the mature Dickens. And they have all the faults of immaturity—which is why, read aloud, they sound so modern. Their author was still imitative: imitating Smollett badly.

Even in the matter of humor, this classic of English humor is frequently forced, more frequently dated. Throughout many of its scenes, you hear the stage director whispering orders to the stagehands for arrangement of the next set, and, as often as not, that set is to the eventual Dickens what the pie-movies are to the best motion-picture of 1936.

Nevertheless, through all such welter, Samuel Pickwick and his companions force their way to vital reality. Their leader, Alfred Noyes says, "was just as much a public character as Mr. Gladstone." Mr. Noyes should add: And every member of the Club remains forever a citizen of the living world.

This is what we should have said about the Pickwick Centennial: this and more—if that editorial enemy of ours hadn't said it so much better.

Dying Sweepstakes.

London, March 30.

THE Irish Hospitals sweepstakes has been silenced in the English press, but there is no suppressing the fact that the lottery was run again in connection with the Grand National, the great 4-mile suicide race at Aintree, near Liverpool, Friday afternoon. This naturally leads one of Irish ancestry to wonder how his kinfolk on the old sod are coming along in their convalescence.

Surely they must almost be able to recognize friends or even sit up and snap viciously at a slab of steak after all these years, considering that they are supposed to have had the benefit of more than $40,000,000 worth of medical attention since the lottery began as a more or less private enterprise in 1930. There are not quite 3,000,000 souls in the Irish Free State and unless the majority of the population has been enjoying very poor health the dividends from the great international gamble should have been sufficient to relieve the sick of every ill money can cure.

In this solicitous frame of mind your correspondent, has made inquiries regarding the sweepstakes and regrets to report that his kinfolk in Connemara and elsewhere south of the pale in which the Protestants live have not been getting their medicine on time and very little medicine at all. There is plenty of money for advertising and salaries and for wine with which to reduce to a state of coma all the journalists of the wide world who can be induced to accept free transportation to Ireland to ballyhoo the promotion.

BUT at last reports the hospitals still had about $25,000,000 coming as their share of the revenue and the good doctors were setting up a shrill clamor on behalf of their patients for a glimpse of this money. The hospitality of management to the journalists who have gone to Dublin to cover the draw has defeated its own purposes in many cases.

This year the English brothers of Fleet street have been spared the ordeal, for their papers are forbidden by English law to permit themselves the remotest reference to the sweepstakes. The journalists of other nations, however, have had to carry on as usual, and some of the boys tottered out of Dublin this week with feeble steps and glazed vision in an advanced state of that ghostly ailment known as the shrieking meemies.

* * * *

IT is still legal to send news of the Irish lottery to most nations, but the copy must be filed by some route which avoids England because the English refuse to handle it even in transit to foreign lands. The British tried moral appeals to their own people and neighborly protests to the government of the Irish Free State before they resorted to a law which is plainly discriminatory in order to prevent the further drain of their money into the Free State treasury and the great frozen hospital fund of $25,000,000 which lies in the banks in Dublin.

Many British public hospitals are supported by voluntary gifts and they were placed at a great apparent disadvantage when the British public spent millions of pounds of spare money on Irish lottery tickets. The Irish hospitals, about 50 in number, were in poverty, too, and probably their distress was worse than that of the British because the Irish civil war drove out of Ireland a great number of wealthy aristocrats who took the remnants of their fortunes with them. This class of people in normal times had been important contributors to the Irish hospitals and their departure deprived these institutions of vital income.

So the lottery in the first place was, as Mr. Hoover would put it, noble in purpose. But it is impossible to spend millions of dollars on medical research and individual treatment in a hurry, and the Irish government pointed out in answer to an urgent request for $1,000,000 for scientific inquiry that such an appropriation all in one lump would be more likely to retard than promote progress. But the reasons for withholding the $25,000,000 from hospitals which are in serious want have not been explained officially.

A SMALL proportion of the fund has been made available and your correspondent would have the figure if he were able to dig it out of the great and confusing mass of statistics in which he has been delving. Anyway the plight of the ailing kinfolk of all those Americans of Irish ancestry who bought lottery tickets from motives tinged with philanthropy is apparently the last consideration of the management. Prior considerations are the Free State treasury, which now exacts a tax on the hospitals' share of the money before placing the remainder in cold storage and fabulous cash royalties to the four individuals who started the lottery and ties up a fund of $125,000 as a guarantee for the prize winners in 1930. The trouble is that the sweep succeeded too well.

It is now likely to die in its own success. The hospitals' share is too big to be spent usefully in a short time and the British boycott was imposed only because the lottery outgrew its philanthropic character and became a serious parasitic growth on the body of England.

Public Opinion In England

Reactions To German Moves Depend On Editorials Read.

By David Wills.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
London.

IN the week since Hitler tore up Locarno, reoccupied the Rhineland and offered to rejoin the League of Nations, England has been riven by a babel of conflicting advice. Touting their policies before the public, the press barons shout their wares in violent disharmony, and the poor public leans one day toward isolation, the next day toward compromise, the day after toward war. Out of the confusion five self-sufficient but entirely different policies can be separated.

Easiest to place is the Rothermere policy as advocated in the Daily Mail: Heil Hitler, and down with the Bolsheviks! Rothermere basks in the smile of dictators, fondles machine guns and airplanes, trembles lest the communists should get at his dividends. He has consistently played up the virtues of Nazism, has lauded Mussolini, condemned League action to stop the Abyssinian war.

In his day he helped the still-born British Fascist movement under Moseley, now he shouts for a bigger and bigger and still bigger airforce, offers a £1,000 cash prize for the best recruiting suggestion. Apostle of violent force, his greatest hate is bolshevism, his greatest friend Mister Hitler, self-appointed bulwark of Europe against Russia. Lord Rothermere's contribution to British policy is to "see what the Russians want, and do the opposite." He would therefore have us ally ourselves with Germany in the war to come against bolshevism; all other things—League of Nations, Versailles, Locarno, Franco-Soviet pact—are but error and evilness to be discarded as rapidly as possible. Might is right, cries Rothermere, and let the capitalists unite against the communists.

As easy to place is the policy of the Daily Worker, which thinks of the European problem in the same terms, but takes the opposite side. Germany, they say, is diabolically intent upon imperialistic war against Russia, and therefore against democracy and communism. It is complacently naive to imagine that any peace can be secured in Europe so long as the Nazis have rule over Germany; Hitler's offers of pacts, understandings, membership of the League, are but bait to deceive the sentimentalists.

The least that England can do according to this argument is to have no truck whatever with Hitler, encircle him as rapidly as possible with a wall of alliances, and do everything possible to provoke internal revolution in Germany which will overthrow Hitler. And the best we can do is to join at once with France, Russia, the Little Entente, attack Germany in the name of sanctions and Locarno, stamp out the hated regime. Since war is inevitable, better have it now in our time, than wait two or three years for Hitler's convenience.

* * * *

THE third proposal is more insidious. It is admitted that Britain should play the part of honest broker in reconciling France and Germany. It is admitted that Versailles was an unjust treaty, and that Locarno carried over from Versailles the permanent demilitarization of the Rhineland as a stigma of inequality. But Germany has deliberately broken not only the dictated Treaty of Versailles, but the voluntarily negotiated Locarno, which contained within it the means of revision.

This treaty breaking has undermined the confidence of the European countries in any new treaty Hitler may offer to sign. Therefore, if the British are to get any admission from the suspicious powers that Hitler's acts are not entirely unprovoked, and that he is in justice entitled to revision, then the British must provide a guarantee against the breaking of future treaties.

But this cannot be done through the League of Nations, since the League is already discredited by its half-hearted measures against Italy, and in any case, since we need Italian aid against potential German oppression, sanctions against Italy must now be called off. The argument concludes that Britain must enter into a specific military engagement with all Germany's neighbors to come to their aid if so much as the tip of a German bayonet appears across their frontiers in unprovoked aggression. For all the show of negotiations with Hitler, we must complete the encircling wall of pre-war military alliances, must write off the League as dead.

* * * *

LORD BEAVERBROOK'S is the fourth policy: Keep Out. Britain is to thank her stars that Locarno is dead and she relieved of its obligations which should never have been undertaken; have as little to do with Europe as possible, retreat from the League of Nations, build up the largest army, navy and air force in the world, leave Europe to settle its own hash.

A variant of this is the policy of Honest Baldwin. To be true he talks of collective security, of Britain's responsibilities under the League, but these are new tricks, and he an old dog who bungles them badly. He may be a little more sympathetic to Germany than Beaverbrook, and perhaps a little more afraid, but by and large he would feel happiest if Britain could get out of this mess without any commitments whatsoever, and could then contentedly debauch herself with a terrific rearmament program, all, of course, in the interests of collective security.

* * * *

THE fifth policy is that advocated in England by the News Chronicle, the Daily Herald, and presumably by Mr. Eden. It is based upon the diagnosis of the German position, which runs that there can be no peace in Europe while one country—Germany—is forcibly kept in a position of inferiority. We should, therefore, have complete sympathy with Germany's efforts to regain her equality, however much we may condemn the legal methods by which she works. And the victor nations must take the responsibility of having stubbornly refused to modify unjust treaties until confronted with Hitler's accomplished facts.

Their second point is that the Nazi regime, with all its virtues in its own eyes and its vices to the outside world, is the product of psychological, political and economic conditions which very largely have been imposed upon Germany by the victors since the war. It follows that the only cure for these conditions is, not force from outside to destroy the Nazis, but a restoration of equality in theory and in substance. If the tension in which Germany lives is relieved from the outside, the inevitable result will be a liberalization of the Nazi regime. Force will only weld the Germans together in defense of their hard-won position.

It is therefore completely false to argue that no treaties can be signed with Germany until the Nazis are overthrown. If this were true, it would be equally true that we cannot have peace in Europe so long as there is communism in Russia, fascism in Italy or, for that matter, democracy in England.

* * * *

THEY continue that it is obvious that Germany has broken treaties, both imposed upon her and voluntarily negotiated, and it is therefore reasonable to demand a guarantee of good faith when Hitler announces that, now he has secured mastery in his own land, he is prepared to rejoin the League of Nations, to sign nonaggression pacts with all his neighbors, to demilitarize his frontiers to the extent that his neighbors will do the same. But it should in fairness be remembered that the history of the last three years has been one of repeated gestures of good faith from Hitler which have been repudiated by France and England. Less than two years ago, in an attempt to sustain the dying Disarmament Conference, Hitler offered, among other things, to limit the air force he was demanding to 50 per cent of the French force, or 30 per cent of the combined force of his neighbors, whichever was the smaller.

His offer was refused out of hand by M. Bartou. When he revived his army he offered to limit it to 200,000 men, and to 300,000; but each offer was ignored. Hitler can honestly maintain that he has given far more pledges of sincerity than any of his neighbors.

It is admitted that the French, coached by the Russians, will be hard to convince of German sincerity, and Britain must be prepared unequivocally to support the French, or any other victim, if in the future Germany makes an act of war against them. But this British guarantee must be given not by a return to military alliances, but through the League of Nations, which was formed for exactly this purpose, and to which Hitler offers to return. Since Russia is a member of the League, exactly the same protection will be available for her as for any other member; if Germany attacks her, all the members are pledged to come to her support.

Britain should therefore refuse to deliver any ultimatum to Germany demanding still more evidence of good faith when so much bad faith has been shown by her neighbors. As a matter of diplomacy it may be a successful halfway house in converting the French to ask for such a sign, but it should not be made a case of "Withdraw, or else . . ."

* * * *

IT is encouraging for the prospects of peace that during the first week's negotiations definite progress had been made toward this last solution. At the start the powers were poles apart. France was hot for no negotiations without complete withdrawal of Hitler's troops, a military alliance from England, or else France would leave the League, and sanctions, military if necessary, would be invoked against Germany. Hitler had outrun both Schacht and the army in his sudden move and was not to be budged from his position. The British were reluctant to do anything.

Then there came a perceptible hardening of the British attitude, and almost a possibility that the French and Russians would get their military alliance. But Socialist opinion in France, upon which the government must rely, began to work against any rigid position which would throw away this last chance to rebuild Europe and might precipitate war. More moderate opinions in Germany tried to influence Hitler to one further show of reasonableness. In Britain the dangers of alliances became apparant, and emphasis on the League grew stronger. And for the vast improvement in the position which changed within the week from talk of war to talk of peace, a great deal of the credit must go not only to Mr. Eden, but to Mr. Van Zeeland, Premier of Belgium, a country which has the most intimate contact with Germany, the most to fear from German aggression, the most to gain from a peaceful solution.

If these negotiations fail, and Hitler is once again rebuffed, then the possibilities of war become immediate probabilities. If they succeed in getting Hitler back into the League, then we are on the threshold of a wholesale reorganization which may transform the economic life of Europe. Mere entry of Germany into the League would enormously relieve the tension which grips every country so that most have forgotten what it feels like to anticipate a generation of peace.

Faith In Negotiations Evidenced By Eden Most Hopeful.

Austrian Troops Watch Nazi Border

Vienna, March 30 (U.P.).—Troops were sent to strategic positions on the Austro-German frontier today co-incident with rumors abroad that Germany is contemplating "forced union" with Austria.

A company of the eighth regiment of Alpine Chasseurs moved up to Ostermeithing, a few miles from the great new German motor highway which touches the Austrian border.

Officially the troop movement was explained as "a necessity for military map making." However Austria has been worried since Hitler startled the world by military reoccupation of the Rhineland and has ordered more vigilant military watch over the frontier.

Couzens Scores 'Inconsistency' In Wheeler Bill

Producers Do Not Know What Course to Take, He Tells Committee.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, charged before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday that governmental "inconsistency" had created a situation in which some industries didn't know "what the hell to do."

His observation came as the Committee heard testimony on the Wheeler bill to eliminate the basing point systems of fixing prices.

"It seems to me this bill is inconsistent with the Robinson bill and some of the decisions of the Federal Trade Commission are inconsistent with both of them," Couzens said.

"How can a producer know on which road he is going? He'll be see-sawnig back and forth and won't know what the hell to do."

"Well, we have to decide which road we're going to take," said Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana.

The witness on the stand was Blaine S. Smith, president of the Penn-Dixe Cement Corporation. He voiced opposition to the Wheeler bill, saying "I am fearful it will establish an inflexible mill pprice—that it will tend toward monopoly."

The bill would prohibit the practice of determining prices by adding transportation charges from any given base point to the mill charge.

The Robinson bill, designed to protect independent merchants, would, as approved by a House Committee, prohibit unfair pprice discriminations. Couzens did not elaborate on his comment regarding the Federal Trade Commission.

Assault Warrant Served on Officer

A warrant charging assault on the 15-year-old son of a Metropolitan policeman was served on Manning Clagett, a Capitol bluecoat, by the boy's father yesterday.

The drama of one policeman turning the authority of his office against another was enacted at the First Precinct Station, where Claget, learning that a warrant for his arrest had been issued, came to give himself up.

The victim of the alleged assault was Paul Grooms, son of Private W. C. Grooms, of the Metropolitan Police Department, who signed the warrant.

Clagett, in his report, charged that a large gang of boys had been chalking Capitol steps and breaking shrubbery. He denied striking young Brooms.

Williams Will Testify On Death of Veterans

Aubrey Williams, assistant relief administrator, probably will be called today before the House World War Veterans' committee to give his version of how 168 veterans, many of them Washington bonus marchers, were carried to their death in a hurricane off the Florida keys last November, Chairman John H. Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, announced yesterday. The veterans were in Civilian Conservation Corps veterans' camps constructing bridges on the keys when the tragedy occured.

Julius Stone, former Florida relief administrator in charge of the camps, will complete his testimony before Williams is called. Rankin said. Veterans Administrator Frank T. Hines will be another witness, but Rankin doubted that he would be called today.

Senate to Hear Ritter On Impeachment Today

By the Associated Press.

The Senate yesterday postponed until 1 p. m. today hearing Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter's reply to House impeachment charges. Delay was taken to permit a study of amendments to the four articles of impeachment filed earlier in the day by House managers.

Accompanied by counsel, Judge Ritter was escorted to a seat on the left of the Vice President's rostrum.

Opposes Wheeler Basing-Point Bill

Sugar Price Controls

peals had held that the company was engaged in a purely intra-State business and that it need not register. The District Court at Baltimore, in ruling on the case, held that the utilities act was unconstitutional.

Refusal of the Supreme Court to hear the case was looked upon as a victory for the Administration. Government lawyers were anxious that test of the law should not be based on this case.

The court did not rule on two New Deal cases now before it involving the Guffey coal act and the securities act of 1933.

Chief Justice Hughes read the 10,000-word sugar decision in which all the justices except Sutherland and Stone concurred. They did not participate.

Dissolution Refused.

The New York Federal Court had enjoined the institute from 45 specific acts in a case brought by the Government. It refused a request that the institute, formed in 1928 under a "code of ethics," be dissolved. The Supreme Court sustained the lower court in enjoining, principally, these practices:

"1. Effectuating any general plan to give the same terms, conditions, or freight applications to customers, regardless of the varying circumstances or particular transactions or classes of transactions or regardless of the varying situation of particular refiners, distributors or customers or classes thereof;

"2. Selling only upon or adhering to prices, terms, conditions or freight applications announced, reported or relayed in advance of sale or refraining from deviating therefrom."

These paragraphs were eliminated from the original injunction, leaving the institute free to do the things specified:

"Effectuating any system for or systematically reporting to or among one another or competitors or to a common agency, information as to current or future prices, terms, conditions, or freight applications, or lists or schedules of the same.

Relaying Information.

"Relaying by or through the Sugar Institute, Inc., or any other common agency, information as to current or future prices, terms, conditions or freight application or any list or schedule of the same.

"Giving any prior notice of any change or contemplated change in prices, terms, conditions or freight applications, or relaying, reporting or announcing any such change in advance thereof."

The Chief Justice, in the lengthy opinion, not only discussed the general application of the antitrust laws, but he took judicial knowledge of what he termed "the public slimness campaign." In 1927, which he said "had substantial effect in discouraging the use of sugar."

In discussing the antitrust laws, Chief Justice Hughes said:

"The restrictions imposed by the Sherman act are not mechanical or artificial. We have repeatedly said that they set up the essential standard of reasonableness. They are aimed at contracts and combinations which 'by reason of intent or the inherent nature of the contemplated acts, prejudice the public interests by unduly restraining competition or unduly obstructing the course of trade.'

"Reasonable Means."

"Designed to frustrate unreasonable restraints, they do not prevent the adoption of reasonable means to protect interstate commerce from destructive or injurious practices and to promote competition upon a sound basis. Voluntary action to end abuses and to foster fair competitive opportunities in the public interest may be more effective than legal process. And co-operative endeavor may appropriately have wider objectives than merely the removal of evils which are infractions of positive law.

"Nor does the fact that the correction of abuses may tend to stabilize a business, or to produce fairer price levels, require that abuses should go uncorrected or that an effort to correct them should for that reason alone be stamped as an unreasonable restraint of trade. Accordingly, we have held that a co-operative enterprise otherwise free from objection, which carries with it no monopolistic menace, is not to be condemned as an undue restraint of trade merely because it may effect a change in market conditions where the change would be in mitigation of recognized evils and would not impair, but rather foster fair competitive opportunities."

The court held that dissemination of information is normally an aid to commerce. It held that competition does not become less free because of the distribution of knowledge of the essential factors entering into commercial transactions.

Illegal Means Unjustified.

"The freedom of concerted action to improve conditions has obvious limitation," the court added. "The end does not justify illegal means. The endeavor to put a stop to illicit practices must not itself become illicit."

Referring to the Sherman act as "a charter of freedom," the court said that it has a "generality and adaptability comparable to that found desirable in constitutional provisions," and that therefore each case requires individual scrutiny.

Referring directly to the suger institute agreement, the Chief Justice said:

"The vice in that agreement was not in the mere open announcement of prices and terms in accordance with the custom of the trade. That practice which has grown out of the special character of the industry did not restrain competition. The trial court did not hold that practice to be illegal and we see no reason for condemning it.

"The unreasonable restraints which defendants imposed lay not in advance announcements, but in the steps taken to secure adherence, without deviation, to prices and terms thus announced. It was that concerted undertaking which cut off opportunites for variation in the course of competition, however fair an appropriate they might be. But, in ending that restraint, the beneficial and curative agency of publicity should not be unnecessarily hampered."

Cite Prior Announcement.

The court pointed out that in the sugar business advance announcements of price increases, giving buyers an opportunity to purchase before prices rise, have been customary. It held that such announcements do not threaten competition.

"On the other hand," the court said, "such provision for publicity may be helpful in promoting fair competition. If the requirement that there must be adherence to prices and terms openly announced in advance is abrogated and the restraints which followed that requirement are removed, the just interests of competition will still be left with whatever advantage may be incidental to its established practice."

The Associated Press reported from New York that officials of the sugar institute declined formal comment on the decision until the full text had been studied. Trade organizations also were studying the decision to determine whether changes in their practices would be necessary. The sugar market remained steady.

Another decision that may have far-reaching future effects was one holding unconstitutional a Washington State law imposing an occupation tax on radio broadcasting. The court held that broadcasting is a phase of interstate commerce.

The court also agreed to pass on the validity of the New York State law establishing minimum wages for the employment of women and children in industries. The State supreme court has held the law unconstitutional. Sixteen other States have similar laws.

The court handed down a total of 14 decisions, all unanimous.

Six New Dams Are Requested In TVA Report

Program Recommended to Congress Would Cost $144,500,000.

Six new dams to harness the waters of the Tennessee River and its tributaries and to complete the program of the Tennessee Valley Authority were recommended yesterday by TVA officials in a special report prepared at the request of Congress. The cost of completing the program, it was said, would be about $144,500,000.

The expenditure, together with the $185,188,525 already authorized by Congress, would bring the total outlay for the huge development to $329,688,525.

New projects recommended include construction of a storage dam on the Little Tennessee River at Fontana, N. C., costing approximately $29,000,000; three new dams in the Tennessee River at Silbertsville, Ky., $60,000,000; dams at Watts Barr, Tenn., on White Creek, $31,000,000, and Coulter Shoals, Tenn., $20,000,000.

Changes Necessary.

Other projects advocated call for raising Wilson Dam, and Lock and Dam No. 1, at Muscle Shoals, $500,000, and raising Hales Bar Pool and dredging activities, $4,000,000. The latter two dams were built before organization of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and the changes are said to be necessary to insure a 9-foot navigable channel in the Tennessee River.

The construction program, including the projects now under way, would be completed by 1944, and the authority urge dthat the necessary funds be made available to meet this deadline, so that labor and materials could be used more economically.

Emphasizing the authority's flood and soil erosion control activities, the report stated that control of Tennessee River floods would hold back as much as 20 per cent of the normal flood waters entering the Mississippi River. "It will contribute substantially to flood relief in the lower Mississippi," and will largely prevent such disastrous floods as the one in April, 1927, when it was estimated that 14 per cent of the Mississippi's height could be attributed to water from the Tennessee basin, the report stated. Furthermore, flood hazards in the Tennessee River basin proper would be reduced.

Flood Control Plan.

The report points out that only through the use of high dams in providing a navigation channel can flood control be assured. By construction of the proposed high dams potential water power is created which, when transferred into electrical energy, can be sold to liquidate the cost of the improvements.

But something more than the building of huge dams is needed to prevent floods and to conserve the soil, the authority agrees.

"Initial reliance," the report says, "may be placed in great reservoirs on the larger streams with sufficient capacity to collect and store the silt washing off the farms and to store the flood waters from denuded lands. It is well, however, to supplement such work with a program promoting types of farm and forest management that will greatly reduce erosion and consequent silting of streams, and that by forest cover, grass crops, and farm terracing, will hold more of the water on the land until it enters the soil, reducing flood flow, adding to ground water supply, and increasing the low water flow of the river."

Water Storage Capacity.

It was explained that if but four more inches of rainfall each year could be absorbed by only one-half of the Tennessee Valley area, a water storage capacity would be created equal to that of the Norris Dam reservoir.

Prevention of soil erosion, says the report, depends largely on getting groups of farmers to work concertedly in preserving their land, since reforestation measures make up only a partial answer to the problem of erosion and flood control in watershed areas.

The authority's report received a favorable reception on Capitol Hill, although direct comment was scarce because of a lack of time to examine the report with thoroughness. Senator George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska, "father" of the Tennessee Valley Authority, indicated he would work to carry the entire project to completion. Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, who has proposed a similar project for the Potomac River basin, said he "heartily concurred" in the projects outlined by the TVA directors.

Supreme Court Turns Attention to Diet Fad

The Supreme Court yesterday took judicial knowledge of the existence of the weight-reducing fad. The learned justices referred to it as the "slimness campaign."

In the Sugar Institute decision they pointed out that the campaign had reduced the consumption of sugar.

The Once Over

Father and Son Talks.

"Popper, why do Presidents go fishing?"

"To get on the other side."

"What other side?"

"The other side of the street."

* * * *

"Is Mr. Roosevelt an angler, popper?"

"I think he must be."

"Why do they call him an angler?"

"Because he knows all the angles."

* * * *

"Is the President a better fisherman than Mr. Hoover was?"

"It can never be settled positively, my son."

"Why not?"

"Hoover brought his fish home in a basket, but you can't expect Mr. Roosevelt to carry a battleship over his shoulder."

"What is the President's favorite fish?"

"The taxpayer."

"Taxpayers aren't fish, daddy."

"Izzat so!"

* * * *

"What kind of equipment does the President use when fishing?"

"A rod, a reel, a line and a wire leader."

"What's a wire leader?"

"Ask Senator Black; he knows."

* * * *

"What kind of bait does he use, popper?"

"He takes a small fish, removes the head, tail and fins; then he scales it, dresses it and cuts it all up into little thin strips."

"Just as if it were a Republican capitalist!"

"You took the words out of my mouth!"

* * * *

"How is a sailfish caught, popper?"

"The fish first taps the bait; then you release the line and let it go back while you count ten."

"Why the count of ten?"

"Well, the Democrats have the habit."

"And after the count of ten, what?"

"Then you pull up the line and set the hook. The sailfish then stages his battle."

"How long does it take to land one?"

"Ordinarily, from a half hour to an hour. But in Mr. Roosevelt's case, I don't know. Farley may have it all fixed so the fish will go Democratic and avoid trouble."

"Is there trouble if you don't go Democratic, popper?"

"Scat! I thought you at least read the newspapers!"

Dearth of Labor Delays Fairfax Works Project

Rural Recreation Reserve Held Up; $20,000 Available.

The establishment of a rural recreational reserve in Fairfax County is being delayed by a lack of PWA workers. The Works Progress Administration has an allocation of $20,000 for labor to complete the project.

County Agricultural Agent H. B. Derr announced yesterday following a conference with A. W. Petersilia, of Alexandria, in charge of county WPA projects, that although the funds are available workers are not.

At least 30 men could be put to work on the preliminary stages of constructing the center, Derr stated, and Petersilia will endeavor to obtain the necessary labor in the near future.

In addition to the $20,000 that will be given the county by the WPA, another $4,397 must be raised locally for building material. This amount is now being collected among the various civic organizations and private donations. Credit will be given on the amount for any timber or other material that might be used.

Whatever may be the outcome of the local labor situation, rural recreational reserve officials plan to send an engineer to look over the land which recently was donated for the purpose by Mrs. James U. Kincheloe, wife of the county commissioner of revenue, with a view toward making recommendations for the location of an artificial lake, buildings and other features.

As soon as the engineer makes his report the county organization has been advised to incorporate and elect seven directors, including the county agricultural and home demonstration agents.

Crockett C. Carr, of Fairfax, is chairman of the county committee that has been developing the project.

Robert Cleary, of River Bend, circuit court of Fairfax County to an indictment charging assault with a dangerous weapon. Judge Walter T. McCarthy imposed a sentence of 8 months on the State road force to run concurrently with a similar sentence imposed by the county trial justice.

Cleary was charged with shooting Roy Newman, January 24, at the River Bend dance hall near Mount Vernon. Following the shooting Cleary is alleged to have attempted to use the gun on Deputy Sheriff George P. McCann, of Fairfax County, who arrested Cleary. leary was sentenced to 8 months in jail for the assault on the deputy sheriff by the trial justice court earlier this month.

Engineer Shoots Woman, Kills Self

Monte Carlo, Monaco, March 30 (AP).—A lover's failure to pay an annual $40,000 heart balm was reported today to have caused auicide pact carried out in a fashionable hotel here.

Police said Jean Germain, 37, a motion picture engineer, shot Yvette Laurent, 34, then turned the gun on himself, dying instantly. Mlle. Laurent was taken to a hospital, where they do not expect her to live.

Friends said the woman left a statement she entered into the pact in despair because her lover had left her to be married and had neglected to pay her a promised income.

According to these same friends, the alleged statement said she threatened to create a scene at her lover's wedding unless three years' heart balm was paid in a lump sum, but that Germain, a childhood friend, had persuaded her to die with him instead.

FIVE NEW DEAL agencies have representatives on the three committees at work on preparing leave regulations and a study of overtime for submission to the President through the Bureau of the Budget. They include the Social Security Board, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Federal Home Loan Land Bank, Tennessee Valley Authority and Farm Credit Administration.

BAKER.

It is noted from the list of committee members that the personnel is predominantly civil service and conservative, and that each official has a long record of administrative service in his respective bureau.

Of the 21 members, only 2 are mowen—Mrs. Julia A. Mauldin, chief, Division of Appointments, Interior, and Mrs. B. M. Stern, assistant secretary, National Labor Relations Board.

The personnel of the three committees follows:

Annual leave—Frank A. Birgfeld, chief clerk, Treasury, chairman; C. D. Jones, superintendent, National Training School for Boys; Charles Piozet, chief, Appointment Division, Navy; R. W. Rigsby, assistant executive officer, Farm Credit Administration; W. W. Richardson, chief, Personnel Division. General Accounting Office; George Scott, chief, Appointment and Pay Roll Section, Social Security Board; G. H. Sweet, chief, Personnel Division, Veterans' Administration.

Sick leave—P. L. Gladmon, chief, Division of Appointments, Agriculture, chairman; Edward J. Gardner, chief, Appointment Division, Commerce; James L. Martin, executive secretary, Public Utilities Commission; Mrs. Julia A. Maulding, chief, Division of Appointments, Interior; Maj. Signey Morgan, secretary, Tariff Commission; Henry W. Riley, auditor, Federal Deopsit Insurance Corporation, and John B. Switzer, chief clerk and personnel officer, Interstate Commerce Commission.

Hours of duty—D. J. Donovan, auditor, D. C. Government, chairman; Gordon R. Clapp, director of personnel, Tennessee Valley Authority; Harvey C. Donaldson, chief clerk, Justice; Russell H. Herrell, comptroller, Government Printing Office; W. D. Searle, chief, Civilian Personnel, War; Mrs. B. M. Stern, assistant secretary, National Labor Relations Board, and R. R. Zimmerman, director of personnel, Federal Home Loan Land Bank Board.

All members of the three committees have been notified of their appointment and have accepted. The groups will begin work immediately, the committee on annual leave meeting this morning.

After they have completed preliminary work, a joint meeting of the three committees will be called to give consideration to mutual problems.

The committee on hours of duty has the additional duty of recommending to the Civil Service Commission regulations and procedure for reporting overtime monthly for the months of July to December, 1936, inclusive, for submission through the commission to Congress.

Tickets will admit guests to either hotel during the evening from 10 to 1:30.

35,000 Croats In Riot Against Yugoslav Rule

Battle Police Breaking Up Demonstration; 6 Hurt, Many Arrested.

By the Associated Press.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, March 30. Reports from Zagreb said a huge crowd of angry Croats today battled Yugoslav police with all manner of weapons for several hours.

Rioting spread to several sections of the city and many shots were exchanged, dispatches said. Six persons were understood to have been injured seriously and many arrested. Rumors some persons had been killed could not be verified.

The disorders started with the funeral of Stephen Jawor, a student who died in the prison to which he was sentenced in 1929 for a political offense. Croats made the funeral the occasion for a vast demonstration against Serb rule.

The veteran Croat leader, Vladko Matchek, at the cemetery addressed a throng which some observers estimated at more than 35,000. A large force of police split the crowd, separating it into parts in various streets.

Reports to the capital said that at one point the crowd raided a sporting goods store to get guns, but was dispersed by a volley from police.

Laborite Suggests Eden Persuade Hitler to Wed

London, March 30 (AP).—The suggestion that Anthony Eden, foreign secretary, try to induce Reichsfuehrer Hitler to marry was made in the House of Commons today.

While Eden was explaining his conversations with Joachim von Ribbentrop, German special ambassador, W. Thorne, Labor Party member, interrupted with:

"May I ask whether he thinks he will be able to persuade Herr Hitler to get married to keep him well balanced?"

Eden did not reply.

Culbertson on Bridge

ANOTHER BATTLE ROYAL.

When I received the following letter, about a week ago, I realized I was simply getting my just deserts:

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: My wife and I play contract regularly against another couple. All four of us read with interest your account of a set game in which you acted as referee, fining the players according to the degree of error. Each of us feels positive that in a game of this sort he or she would come out paying the smallest or fewest fines.

"Inasmuch as your column started this fight, we feel that you have a certain responsibility. Will you admit it and discharge it by acting as referee for a couple of hours any night of your selection? We promise to play without lethal weapons of any kind. Yours very truly,

On due consideration I had to admit my responsibility and accepted the invitation, not without the utmost trepidation when I thought of the added risk of judging feminine players.

I aged appreciably during those hectic two hours. Perhaps my detailed account will explain why.

For purposes of identification I shall name the couples Mr. and Mrs. Black and Mr. and Mrs. White. I might say that when I arrived at the formers' lovely apartment the utmost connubial felicity was apparent. When I left, but I am getting ahead of my story! This was the first hand dealt.

South, dealer.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	Pass	2 clubs
Pass	2 no trump	Pass	3 no trump
Double	Redouble [final bid]

Mr. White, on lead, went into a long huddle and finally placed the diamond queen on the table. (For a tense moment I thought the game might end then and there. His wife turned a curious shade of violet in her terrific effort at self-control.)

West won with the king and knocked out the club ace. Mrs. White might just as well have thrown all her cards except the spade ace in the wastbasket. There was no defense possible. Mr. Black ran off four clubs, three hearts, the king of spades and then finessed against the diamond jack for two more diamond tricks. In all, he won eleven tricks, two over the redoubled contract. Quite a swing from the 600 points that North-South should have won.

Mr. White recognized the advantage of a prompt confession. "I know, don't tell me!" he said. "Here ir $10 for a class D error. Of course, I should have led a spade."

"If you think you're going to get off with paying a measly fine," said his wife in a tone that chilled even my marrow, "you're crazy! You'll hear from me later!"

"Then you do realize," I said, "that South's double left you no choice, that you were obligated to lead a spade unless you had a good suit of your own, with an entry."

"I do, indeed, now!" he answered so dolefully that everyone's sympathy was touched, except his wife's.

Mr. Black had a cat-swallowing-canary look, but he soon lost it.

"By the way," I said, that redouble of yours without a double stopper in spades will cost you just $5, a class C error. Results don't count here!"

Marine Art Of President To Be Seen

Paintings, Prints and Ship Models to be Shown at Corcoran.

Private Exhibit Begins Saturday; Public to See Collection.

By the Poe Sisters.

Invitations have been issued for the first showing here of President Roosevelt's collection of marine paintings, prints and ship models, Saturday from 2:30 to 5:30 at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. The private showing is expected to draw members of Washington's official and diplomatic set especially interested because it is the President's collection, as well as those art lovers whose chief interest is in the artistic value of the exhibition. It will be on public view until May.

Every other person in Washington is a collector of some kind or another, and President Roosevelt is no exception. His hobbies are marine pictures, ship models and stamps. "The White House has gone nautical," exclaimed a visitor one day as he gazed on the President's collection of ship pictures and ship models which occupies much of the wall space and space available in his study, the corridors and rooms of the living quarters of the White House family.

Among the articles in the exhibit are some of President Roosevelt's rarest treasures. Many of the ship models are museum pieces, wrought with the great skill of old sea-going men long dead.

It is no new thing for a President to have such a hobby. As a matter of fact, most of the Presidents were collectors, especially John Quincy Adams, who sought rare books far and wide and had a famous collection. He was also an autograph hunter, and once related how he had ridden miles by steamer and in great discomfort to secure a special autograph for his collection.

Harding Collected Pipes.

President Harding had the true collector's zest when it came to pipes. On the desk of the small room he used as a study on the second floor of the White House, now the family living room, the President placed his choicest array of pipes, each one with its own history familiar to him and many of them of unique workmanship. They were for use as well as for show, and he always selected his after dinner pipe from this array when dining informally.

Another pipe collector in official life here was the late Speaker Champ Clark of Missouri. He confined his collection to corn cob ones, however, and most of them came from the "Show Me" State. When the Speaker gave his famous luncheons in the private dining room assigned to him all the men guests were presented with corn cob pipes at the conclusion of the meal. The ladies present had their moment when the Speaker would display his really fine collection of gavels for their pleasure.

The late Mrs. George Dewey had a collection of fans, each one of them a gem of historic and artistic interest. They were framed and hung in her drawing room. It was surprising how much the gentle little wife of the Admiral of the Navy knew of the history, design and the making of fans through the centuries. Some of the prettiest of her fans were the gift to her of Admiral Dewey, when he returned in triumph, the Nation's hero, from Manila Bay.

An entire room at Friendship, the home of Mrs. Edward Beale McLean and her children, is filled with china cats and other animals of all sizes and varieties most of them of great value, collected by the late Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean and the collection continued by Mrs. McLean. The present chatelaine of Friendship never travels anywhere, but she finds another specimen to add to the collection. The cat room at Friendship is the mecca for collectors of such rarities who look admire and envy their fortunate owners.

Mrs. Barnett's Costumes.

Whenever a play is given by society folk in Washington they think at once of Mrs. George Barnett's collection of costumes of all nations. The majority of her costumes are Chinese and Japanese. Most of them she acquired while in China with Gen. Barnett and some of them were presented to her by the Dowager Empress with whom she formed a friendship. One of her costumes including head dress, shoes and lovely beads was the royal robe worn on state occasions by the Empress herself.

Those privileged to view the collection of dolls in international costumes belonging to Mrs. Frank B. Noyes, wife of the president of the Associated Press, have a rare treat. Mrs. Noyes has had the dolls dressed in keeping with the periods and historical events and personages they represent and even their faces are true to the types and races of people whom they resemble.

By the way, speaking of the President's marine collection once more, when the Franklin Roosevelts first moved into the White House the ship pictures and models were piled against the walls until the President could find time personally to direct their hanging. He changed them many times and spent much time deciding just where the most precious of his art treasures should be hung. Now and then he has a re-hanging. When he adds a new picture to his collection it is a time of great rejoicing. The President knows the stories that go with each picture and can talk by the hour about them with congenial listeners.

Catholic Association Slated to Have Dinner

The Washington Chapter of the Catholic University of America Alumni Association will have a dinner meeting at 7 o'clock this evening at the University Club. Followed by a program of music by members of the chapter, and motion pictures of the Orange Bowl football game.

The speakers for the occasion will be Mr. Frederick V. Murphy, head of the Department of Agriculture; Mr. Arthur J. Bergman, director of athletics, and Mr. Edward M. Curran, a member of the faculty of the School of Law who was recently appointed judge of the District Police Court.

Grandchildren of the Official Set in Washington

Senator and Mrs. Thomas P. Gore have had as their guests for the last few weeks their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Gore, jr., and small granddaughter, Mary Elizabeth, shown below with her mother. They will return next week to their home in Bangor, Me.

Another attractive Congressional granddaughter is blonde, brown-eyed Faith Hollowell, daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. John A. Hollowell, who have had as their guests for the winter Mrs. Hollowell's parents, Representative and Mrs. Allard Gasque. Little Faith, who was born in Manila, has already been around the world at the age of 16 months. She is shown at the right with her mother. Lieut. and Mrs. Hollowell and Representative and Mrs. Gasque will leave soon for Charleston, S. C., where they will visit the magnolia and azalia show, beginning April 14.

Mrs. Moran Is Hostess at Tea For Johnsons

Wife of Maine Representative Honors Visitors From Home State.

Mrs. Edward C. Moran, jr., wife of Representative Moran, of Maine, was hostess at a tea yesterday afternoon in honor of President Franklin Johnson, of Colby College, and Mrs. Johnson, who are here from Waterville, Me. The affair was given at the Congressional Club, with alumni of the college residing in Washington, Baltimore and Richmond as guests.

Receiving with Mrs. Moran were the guests of honor and Mr. Ernest G. Walker, national president of the Colby Alumni Association, and Mrs. Walker.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Wallace H. White, jr., wife of Senator White; Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, wife of Representative Brewster, and Mrs. Simon M. Hamlin, wife of Representative Hamlin, all of the Maine delegation; Mrs. Samuel Andrews and Mrs. C. J. Fernald, both alumnae of Colby; Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Mrs. George Ross and Hope Ridings Miller.

The table was decorated with a basket of jonquils, lavender sweetpeas and pink roses arranged with calla lilies and lighted with candles in lavender and yellow. The Easter motif was suggested in the candies, which were in the shape of little rabbits.

All of the members of the Maine delegation attended the function with the exception of Representative Hamlin and Representative Moran, who now are in Maine attending the Democratic State convention.

Mrs. Moran was dressed in a wine-colored chiffon gown, with which she wore a blue hat trimmed with wine-colored flowers of the same shade as her gown.

New, Nourishing Cream Discovered by Mignon

By Mignon.

The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, endorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

THE THING everybody seems to be after is a rich nourishing cream which does not cost too much. About the most expensive cream you can buy is a so-called nourishing cream. They are usually creamy in appearance and not terribly stiff creams. I think there is a very good oil used in making most of them.

I have found you one that I think fills the bill and will not flatten out your pocketbook. It is a very rich nourishing cream designed to benefit dry, lined or wrinkled skin. Personally, I think that wrinkles should be kept away in the first place by using plenty of cream.

Then you will not be disappointed if you can't get rid of them once they are thoroughly registered on your face. The old ounce-of-prevention rule still holds good.

After cleaning your face, give it a very generous dose of this tissue cream, rubbing it gently to force it in. Wipe the excess cream off with tissues, and then climb into bed. If your skin is very much wrinkled or dried, leave quite a bit of it on over night.

If you use this cream in the day time, which you might very well do, do not put powder on until you have used a foundation cream—unless you want to make mud pies in your pores. The same manufacturer makes a very good foundation cream, and that, too, is inexpensive.

I harp considerably on the subject of foundation creams, but it is only because I have learned that there is no better protection for the pores against a riot of makeup than a surface which will hold powder and coloring until you are ready to wash it off. If we women are going to paint like Indians—and we are—something has to be done to protect the skin. If you try these creams, you will thank me, I know, both because of the quality and the price.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column, call The Washington Post, NAtional 4200, Branch 323.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Unconsciousness in Diabetes.

THE word diabetes, meaning a syphon, was first used by Aretaeus about the beginning of the Christian era to describe a rapidly fatal wasting disease associated with the profuse excretion of "honey urine." Until a few years ago physicians faced the condition courageously but ineffectually until, as most of us know, the discovery of insulin the internal secretion of the pancreas—pointed the way to normal activity despite the disease.

Most patients can be taught to protect themselves, to recognize the symptoms that result from too much insulin or from that serious complication—diabetic coma. When unconsciousness comes on it presents a sharp crisis as the life of the patient is at stake. Either recovery or death usually follows within 24 hours. No emergency in medicine demands more prompt and intelligent management.

What brings on this complete loss of the senses? Dietary indiscretions are primarily at fault. There is usually an incomplete burning of fat because carbohydrates (starches and sugars) are present to an excess degree. Many patients are bored with the rigid diet which they are advised to follow. The result is that they will break over and indulge in sweets even though they know the danger in so doing.

Sometimes patients who are taking pancreatic secretion and who are functioning well under its influence will omit it for a time, or they may believe that because of its influence they can use an unlimited amount of starch in the diet. One such patient lapsed into unconsciousness following a rather generous bedtime snack. The sugar-burning power of insulin had not been calculated for this added amount of food.

Homemade Cake's Wide Appeal Gives It Class in Contest

THE GENERAL appeal of homemade cake makes it a favorite culinary subject and for that reason cakes have been chosen this week as the subject of The Post recipe contest.

The usual six prizes of $1 each will be awarded for the six best cake recipes. The prize winning recipes will enter in the final judging at the close of the contest to determine the winners of the four grand prizes: first, a chromium and black waffle set which includes a tray, iron, batter bowl, ladle and sirup pitcher; second, a streamlined electric iron with heat control for every type of fabric; third; an electric casserole, and fourth, a smart electric kitchen clock for the modern kitchen.

Simply write out your favorite cake recipe and send it to Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to post your recipe in time to reach this office by Saturday morning.

Make Inventory Of Personality, Advises Expert

Likable Person Has 4, Unlikable 25 Bad Habits, He Finds.

WHAT annoying personality traits do you possess? Make an inventory of yourself, advises Dr. Blake Crider, head of the psychology department of Fenn College, and ruthlessly weed out the little habits that irritate other persons.

About 65 per cent of job failures are due to certain personality peculiarities rather than to a lack of competency, Dr. Crider believes. Under his direction, a canvass was made of several thousand persons to learn what traits in other persons they considered most disagreeable.

Nobody Perfect.

The result, according to the Associated Press, showed that the most likable persons had about four bad traits and those most disliked had at least 25 annoying habits.

Just why "that girl at the office" is considered a bore, a grouch, or a pest can be answered by analyzing her by the following questions:

Is she a gusher?
Does she get too familiar on slight acquaintance?
Is she always trying to be funny?
Does she laugh too much at her own jokes?
Is she a goody-goody person?
Does she brag about her love affairs?
Is she fussy about having things just right?
Are her feelings easily hurt?
Does she consider herself superior to others?
Does she make fun of people behind their backs.
Is she bold in correcting mistakes of others?

Grouches Tabooed.

Is she a grouch?
Does she talk too much?
Does she flatter others unnecessarily?
Is she artificially dignified?
Does she borrow too frequently of others?
Does she boast her accomplishments?
Does she monopolize conversation?
Does she pose to try to make an impression?
Does she keep her body and clothes clean?
Does she brood over personal grievances?
Is she callous to troubles of others?
Is she ready to boo success of others?
Does she talk glibly on matters on which she is not informed?
Can she be depended upon to do what she says she will do?
Does she go out of her way to help others?
Does she return promptly what she borrows?
Does she keep her nose out of other people's business?
And can she see a joke on herself?

Leather Jackets Favored.

Jackets for Sports Frocks Attractive for Summer Wear

By LAURA I. BALDT, A. M.

PARIS is delighting with all manner of wee jackets this season for sports frocks. The darling costume patterned for today shows a delightful summery affair, to be carried out in printed cotton with plain cotton to contrast. The jacket, belted in at the waistline, is reminiscent of the gay nineties. Another suggestion is tub pastel dress with the jacket of flannel. Two contrasting shades in linen as violet dress and plum jacket are very effective for this simple-to-sew costume.

Style No. 2658 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 16 requires 2¾ yards of 39-inch material for dress with 1¾ yards of 39-inch material for jacket. Send 10 cents (10c) (coin is preferred) for pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. Be sure to state size you wish. New spring fashion book costs 10 cents. Send for your copy today. Address order to The Washington Post, Pattern Department, 160 Fifth avenue, New York, N. Y.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Woman Deals Heavy Blow to Man's Pride in Making Him Pensioner on Her Bounty.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please advise me as soon as possible. For four years I went with a married man, although he isn't divorced. He hasn't been working for three years. I gave him money, clothes and his meals. He asked me to marry him as soon as he is free. He told me he loved me. Then he told me he was going to the country to work with a saw-mill outfit for the winter. I believed him at the time he told me this and went away.

Mary Haworth

* * * *

I didn't hear from him for two weeks. One day I went to town and ran into his sister by accident. She told me he had returned to his wife. I was terribly shocked. Then later I had a special delivery letter from him, saying he was coming back to me and would never leave me again. When he came I asked him if he had been living with his wife. He said no, and became furious with me.

* * * *

Miss Haworth, should I believe in him and wait for him? Will he ever marry me? Please tell me what to believe and what to do. Will he deceive me again? WORRIED.

* * * *

Hard to Say What to Believe in This Case.

DEAR WORRIED: To tell you what to believe in this situation is not so simple as it may seem on the surface. The fact that the man became furious in his denial of having lived with his wife after having declared his love for you is rather strong circumstantial evidence that he was speaking out of a guilty conscience. Had he been innocent of the charge, it seems to me he might have been pleased and flattered by your jealousy and might have laughed away your fears rather than stormed angrily at the suggestion.

* * * *

On the other hand, his sister may have told a deliberate untruth in an effort to break up your unconventional association with her brother. She may be inclined to mischief-making, or she may have conscientious scruples against her married brother's making love to and accepting bounty from another woman while still legally bound to his wife. She may have decided to strike while the iron was hot—in other words, to sow the seed of distrust and resentment in your mind at a time when he was not present to defend himself and at a time when it was impossible for you to check on his actions.

* * * *

However, the thing one may choose to believe in this matter doesn't greatly alter the face of the thing one should do—which is to break off the association. Whether or not he made a brief return to his wife recently; whether or not he is playing one woman against another now, the fact remains that the four years you have devoted to him have been four wasted years. You have undoubtedly tarnished your good name and lessened your chances of marrying any man by letting four years of your youth slip by in open association with a married man. You have spent money which will probably never be repaid, for the expenditure of which you have nothing to show. You have, with the best intention in the world, struck a heavy blow to the man's pride in making him a pensioner on your bounty, and thereby put him in a position where, like as not, he will one day transfer his affections to some other woman who has the Eve-like wisdom to treat him as if he were the ablest man on earth and to look to him to provide for her. As the majority of such insecure relationships go, I believe you have already run the course of your hold on this man. I believe if you don't drop him soon, he will drop you.

* * * *

Whether you believe him or not, don't wait for him any longer. If by any chance he is sincerely devoted to you and worthy of the kindness you have already shown him, your decision to put an end to this unconventional relationship will open his eyes to the necessity of taking a more manly attitude toward the situation. If he really wants to marry you, he will make some concrete effort to bring marriage about. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

TWO ON SAFARI

By George Agnew CHAMBERLAIN

Chapter XXXVI.

"I Drink a Toast to——"

MORLAND glanced at him reprovingly. "Jodie," he remarked, "contrary to what you told me, I find your friend has rotten manners." He turned again to Ballard and said softly in Thonga, "Stranger, the day is fine."

"It is indeed a fine day," answered Ballard gravely in the same tongue.

"Do you come from afar?"

"From very far," said Ballard softly, "from the land of the Inglezes who live beyond the furthermost limits of the sea."

"How are your wives?"

"I have no wife."

Nwamutambe's eyebrows went up in outraged consternation. "Yet you approach the hubo in the manner of a man of importance in his own land!"

"Stop it!" cried Josephine furiously. "I won't have it! If you say another word I can't understand I'll scratch all your eyes out."

"Why, Jodie!" protested Morland, "I was only finding out whether he's married. Isn't that what you said you'd like to know?"

"I didn't!" she spluttered in her anger. "All I said was I wondered."

"Well, you needn't wonder any more. He says he isn't, and you ought to know by this time whether to believe him or not."

"It's more important to me at the moment," said Ballard, "to know whether I can believe Miss Cascoden. She told me she loves you more than any other man on earth; later on she assured me you're not her brother. I wish you'd loosen up, like a good chap, and verify the last of the two statements."

"You must forgive me for not answering at once," said Morland. "Try to put yourself in my place. For a year I've lived Thonga, eat Thonga, thought and slept Thonga. I was inclined to like you at first sight, but permit me an Americanism. Your haste has all the markings of a sock in the jaw and I feel as if I were conversing with the hind foot of one of your famed Missouri mules—handsome beasts. I must say.

Ballard's cheeks colored violently under their tan and for an instant his gray eyes gleamed angrily; then, slowly, his lips broke in a winning smile.

Tells of His Love.

"You're right, Morland; absolutely right. I never realized before how wide is the chasm of impatience which divides our impetuous race from the native dignity of the African. My only excuse is that I'm miserably in love with Miss Cascoden. I've seen her for weeks, boy by day, woman by night. I've known her grimy as a chimney sweep, fresh as a drop of dew. Dirty or clean I love her from her feet to the top of her head and back again."

"Haste! Haste!" groaned Morland, throwing his hands to his temples. "The man's mad, Jodie. Can't you stop him?"

"Why should I?" said Josephine coolly. "I like it. He does that all the time."

Ballard rose to his feet and stood staring down and through them both. "I know I'm mad. I've been going slowly and steadily crazy ever since the night a fairly respectable-looking girl told me she was going wherever I went. She's stuck to me ever since like a leech, or a tick, or a vampire bat, or anything else that sucks a man's blood, grows fat and laughs. I invite you to dine with me tonight at 7; in the meantime you can both go to hell."

Only at the conclusion of his speech did he perceive they were doubled up and holding their stomachs as if they had the colic. He left them, went to sit beneath the great tree at the edge of the tarn and proceeded to finish stringing the tribute of pearls he had levied on Ibn. Ali arrived with the safari and started to set camp. Ballard paid no heed, awaiting word that all was ready. The necklace finished, he shaved with unusual care, bathed and started to put on pajamas as usual but changed his mind and solemnly togged himself out in white shirt, mess jacket, cummerbund, dress trousers and pumps.

He felt lonely—lonely and abused. Returning to the table at the verge of the pool he ordered himself a bottle of champagne. He was half through it before Josephine came running down the declivity from the kraa. Catching a glimpse of his white jacket from afar, she gasped; then, unseen by him, she made a dash for her own tent, opened the larger of her two trunks and took out a badly creased chiffon frock. She almost cried at seeing its condition but decided to make the best of it; after all there would be no woman present who would know enough to see whether it had been freshly pressed or not. By dark she was ready but waited behind the dropped flaps of her tent until she heard Morland's arrival and Mallory's greeting.

"What's happened to Miss Cascoden?" asked Ballard morosely.

"Jodie? She came down an hour ago."

Appraises Her Men.

"I'm here," said Josephine, stepping out from the tent and walking slowly toward them, careful not to trip on high heels, grown unfamilar.

Morland, who had not changed his garb in any particular except that he wore his sandals, took her attire as well as Mallory's as a matter of course.

"I must say," he murmured admiringly, "you do yourself well, old chap."

Josephine's eyes swept approvingly over Morland's golden bronze body from his sandaled feet to the grotesque pompon, then rested on Ballard. Never had he shown to greater advantage in spite of the troubled shadow on his brow.

She glanced down at her bare shoulders—white, so white all down her arms until they collided with the burned brown of her long-fingered hands.

She was like one in a dream. Her nostrils distended to the faintly acrid unforgetable odors of Africa. She was alive. Her body throbbed in unison with the heartbeat of the earth. She had boasted to Ballard she had never cried. Well—from now on she could cry quite easily, from now on her arms were wide open. She played with her brimming tumbler, then raised it, her eyes soft, not looking at either Morland or Mallory.

"I drink my own toast," she murmured. "To the two men I love best on earth."

Ballard felt as though a cool hand had been laid on his forehead. His troubled spirit was immediately at peace, so deeply peaceful that he shrank from rushing Josephine into dotting her i's and crossing her t's. Why ask her to explain exactly what she meant when already the moment dripped happiness?

"Haste! Haste!" he murmured, mimicking Morland. "Let's step easy tonight. Honor where honor is due. Consider Jocko's feelings."

"Jocko?" inquired Morland with a raised eyebrow.

"The cook," explained Josephine.

Never as a meal served with more eclat, with greater sureness or better timing. Hot plates, relayed by Ali and Abdul, ghost-like in the snowy gowns they had resurrected the moment they perceived this was to be an occasion. Soup, fish, saddle of reedbuck, three-vegetable salad of heart of palm, a sect and a savory. Then coffee—such coffee as permeates the body through the nose from afar before it follows down the throat. Morland leaned back, his eyes dreamy with complete fulfillment.

"I can't kiss Jocko," he murmured. "It wouldn't be right. I mean it isn't done. But I can cross his palm with gold. Dig out a sov, Jodie."

Coming awake, Morland glanced at her in surprise. "Then, how did you get here, pretty? Been living on the towns?"

"No; on Ballard. He's paid for everything since Johannesburg. We owe him a lot, besides 5 pounds I cadged off Mrs. Semster of South Africa."

"Who's she?"

"Why? What happened?"

"Smith-Brandon."

"Eric?"

"Yes. He'd worn out the trick of cabling his precious employers you were dead in order to wheedle another draft out of them, so he had the bright idea of landing them indirectly by trying it on your bank. It worked—I mean, it worked as far as we're concerned. The bank believed him; it shut down on our joint account."

"Clever chap, Eric," said Morland admiringly. "But if you had already started, how could it affect you?"

"My letter of credit was canceled. William Jones cabled me. We owe him a lot, too—a pension for life."

"Where did he cable you"

"At Delgoa Bay. He knew I'd pass through there."

Ballard leaned across the corner of the table, seized her wrist with one hand and her chin with the other, forcing her to look into his eyes.

"We—joint account," he stuttered. "Joint account! Are you and Morland married? Are you?"

U. S. Information Unit Offers Some Statistics to Prove Theory.

"YOU KNOW WHAT a woman's curiosity is. Almost as great as a man's!" Oscar Wilde once declared.

But judging from the queries that come in to the U. S. Information Service, the famous English writer was wrong, and the distaff side is not nearly so curious as the other.

"We have many more questions from men than from women," Miss Harriet Root, chief of the bureau, said yesterday. "Just why that is, I don't know," she continued, "perhaps some wives suggest their husbands write or call in, instead of doing it themselves."

Manned by Women.

The bureau is "manned" almost entirely by women, however. We have 15 feminine employes and only one man—a clerk—in the whole office, not counting the janitor and the messenger boy, said Miss Root, continued. "For example, many of with queries that come in," she continued. For example, many of the 4,500 answers we sent out last month had to do with the Constitution, the Supreme Court, the WPA, the TVA and bills pending in Congress.

"Right now with spring in the offing, we are getting numerous 'seasonal questions.' About this time of year, it seems everyone in the country is interested in raising frogs. Then, too, there are many requests for information about seeds, gardening and cleaning and modernizing homes. In a week or two, the cherry-blossom queries will come in from virtually every State in the Union."

Many Odd Queries.

She emphasized the fact the service is a directing agency as well as an information bureau. "If we don't know the answers here, we generally know where to find them, or we can refer the questions to other departments where the information can be obtained," she said.

Discussing unusual queries that have recently come in, Miss Root mentioned that one man inquired what his real name was, whether he had been legally adopted as a child, and by whom. Another wanted to know if it is possible to find whether his finger prints are on file at the Department of Justice. Still another—a producer in India—wanted a list of U. S. markets for tanka beans (used to scent snuff), and another man wondered where he could sell his supply of angleworms.

"Most questions, however, pertain to emergency agencies, their employes, purposes and cost," she said.

Has Filing System.

Information has been placed on file as it has been requested, Miss Root explained. As a result of two years' work the bureau now has an elaborate filing system, numerous mimeographed pamphlets, charts and scrap books containing the answers to almost any question arising about legislation, WPA projects, social security act benefits, duties of Cabinet members, or purposes of current Federal agencies.

"What are some of the sources from which all this information comes?" Miss Root was asked.

"From scrap books we have compiled the last two years," she said, "and from mimeographed pamphlets, charts, the various 'Who's Who,' the Congressional directories, personnel lists and current releases from all the Federal bureaus. But we probably get more answers from the 'Statistical Abstract of the United States' than any other one book," she went on. "It's a veritable gold mine of facts."

Children Shift Ambitions Often In Early Years

Parental Worries Uncalled For if Boy Jumps From This Goal to That.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. BROWN was worried about Sam's future. He seemed unable to make up his mind as to what he was going to be. One day it was a mechanic, another, a lawyer. Then he became interested in art and a week later he had turned to medicine. He was now 14 and still changed his ambition from week to week.

"When," she asked, "will he settle down? And shall I hold him to his statements? Shall I take them seriously or laugh at them?"

Too Young for Decision.

Fourteen is still too young for one to expect fixity of purpose in most children. Some boys and girls seem to know what they want to do or be almost from the cradle, others shift and change up to the moment of their final decision. It is not unusual for a boy to reach his junior or senior year in college before he decides on his life work.

Generally it is the child with wide tastes and varied gifts who cannot make up his mind. The world offers such unlimited possibilities, each one of which is attractive. All that the parents can do or have the right to do is to insist on his making some choice before it is too late, and not drifting along all his days as a dilettante, a taster of life.

No Need for Anxiety.

With the little boy, however, there is no need for anxiety. Most children play with the idea of a dozen careers before they reach their teens. Nearly every boy goes through the fireman, soldier, sailor, policeman stages. They are an expression, not of ambition to accomplish, but of a desire for independence and power.

One should not take these dreams seriously, nor yet laugh at them. They are of no more importance than any other phases the child goes through, and should be accepted like slang and style in clothes.

Parole Staff 'Inadequate,' La Roe Finds

But Board Functions 'More Successfully' He Declares.

90 % of 156 Freed in 1935 Made Good, Report Shows.

The Board of Indeterminate Sentences and Parole is functioning "more successfully and more adequately" than ever before, Walbur La Roe, jr., stated yesterday in a report on the board to the District Commissioners.

"Though still handicapped by an insufficient and underpaid staff, and by other difficulties, the board is able to give more adequate supervision than was possible the years before," La Roe reported.

Ninety per cent of the 154 prisoners paroled during the 1935 fiscal year made good, the chairman said; of the number released, 15 have had their parole revoked, 11 of these for minor infractions of the law or for violations of the board's rules, according to the report.

386 Under Supervision.

"The more serious crimes committed by men paroled in 1935 have consisted of one case of impersonating a physician, one case of robbery and assault and one case of drinking and attempted suicide," La Roe reported. "This was out of a total of approximately 5,000 arrested for felonies during the same year.

"Counting all paroled men under our supervision during the year, there were 386, and the number of paroles revoked was 30."

La Roe explained that the benefits of parole were never intended for the confirmed criminal. "Our policy," he said, "of denying parole to such men is reflected in the very small number of serious crimes committed by our paroled men."

Poverty Is Blamed.

Many of the men at Lorton Reformatory are very young, 200 being under 21. Jobs and suitable homes are found for these young men before paroling them, the chairman said, and added, "We have had excellent co-operation from the businessmen of Washington in providing jobs for these men. It is with these young men that a board of parole can do its most effective work."

"Poverty is a prolific cause of crime," La Roe declared. "I the District this is accentuated by the large Negro population. More than two thirds of our prisoners are Negroes. This is not due to the fact that the colored man is by nature any more of a criminal than the white man, but is due rather to the fact that the conditions of economic and social inferiority under which many colored people dition of poverty and distress which live in the District produce a conlead directly to crime.

Urges Inebriate Farm.

"It is more difficult for the colored man to find employment. Paroled colored prisoners must go back to the same conditions of poverty and distress that caused the original crime. We are paying a heavy price for the conditions under which the colored people are required to live. The board strongly recommends more recreational facilities for colored youths."

For the "distressing number of prisoners who are inebriates," La Roe stated that the board is strongly in favor of the bill recently introduced in Congress, on recommendation of District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, calling for the establishment near Lorton of a farm for inebriates.

The principal need of the board, La Roe stated, is to have an efficient and adequately paid staff. About this he said:

"The logical administrative head is the secretary of the board, who now receives the inadequate salary of $2,00. Our chief parole officer, now receiving $2,100, is near the point of resigning because of the low salary. We strongly recommend a salary of $4,300 for the administrative head of our organization, and not less than $3,200 for our chief parole officer. Our experience indicates that we could operate efficiently with a total budget of approximately $18,000.

Low Pay Cited.

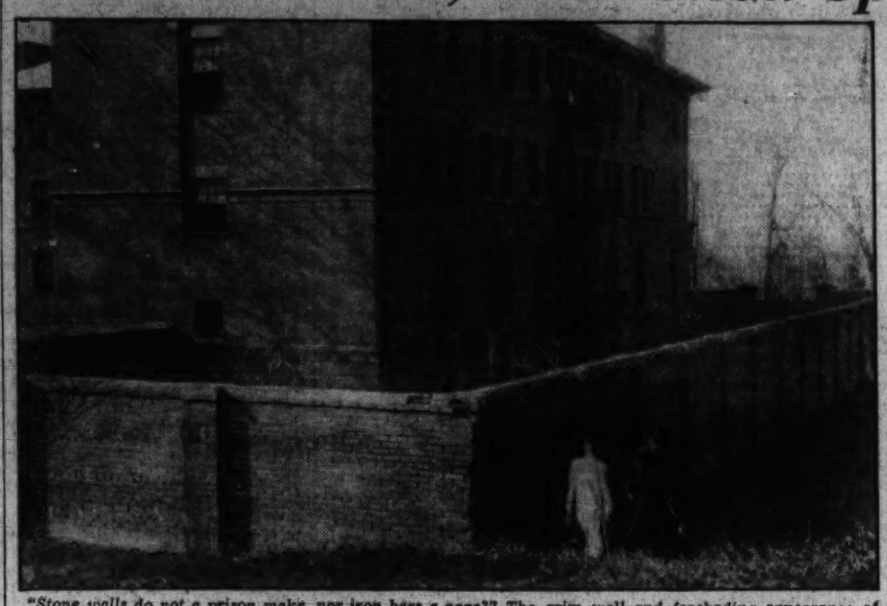
"Our parole officer at Lorton, the sole representative of the board at the prison and in contact with the prisoners before parole, was given a stenographer's salary at the time of the original organization of the system, and he now receives a salary of $1,440 which is far too low. Clearly, $2,400 would not be an excessive salary for this position. The board will continue to be handicapped as long as this important position is treated like that of a junior stenographer or typist.

"In many of the so-called mental cases we sorely need a psychiatrist or a mental clinic of some kind. There is none at Lorton. We also need a social worker at Lorton, to act as "big brother" to the prisoners. We do not know the prisoners and their traits as well as we should, nor are we able to help them with their problems as we could if we had a man there trained in such work. It might be possible, with adequate compensation, to combine these two positions."

Asks Independent Board.

La Roe said that the entire staff of the board is on the pay roll of the reformatory, "and is naturally more or less subservient to the reformatory officials, which is not a desirable situation. We have had excellent co-operation from officials during the formative period of the board's existence, but no real solution of our organization problems and work is possible until the board is made independent and given funds with which to work."

Training School Head, Admitting 'Bad Conditions,' Plans Clean-Up



"Stone walls do not a prison make, nor iron bars a cage?" The grim wall and foreboding appearance of the National Training School for Girls.

Dr. Smith Wants to Go Before Senate Group to Ask Funds.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, Saturday said he would "send a girl to hell before I'd send her to the National Training School for Girls."

Yesterday, Dr. Carrier Weaver Smith, new superintendent of the institution for delinquents at Conduit road and the District line, agreed with the Senator, if conditions remain as she found them a month ago. However, she has plans for a complete reorganization.

"Out of 20 institution girls who have died since their release during the last ten years, 13 of them have died of tuberculosis or other lung trouble," she said, "and that is a serious reflection on the hygenic conditions and the diet here.

Large, gray-haired, determined and eager to appear before the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations to plead her cause, the physician tersely summed up what she found when she came to the institution and declared many of the conditions still exist.

"No bedrooms have any heat or electric light.

"There are no proper sanitary facilities. In one house 19 girls and 5 babies use the only bath.

"I'm aggressive. This place must either be completely renovated or burned down, if I am to stay.

"This place is completely walled in and all the buildings are connected by underground passages. The idea was to keep the girls from running away, but that has resulted in their being indoors all winter. Many have not touched their feet outside since last fall.

"They had no exercise in the fresh air, consequently, and many had not suitable colthing for outdoors."

"Keeping many girls under one roof was an experiment in economy and failed.

While Senator Copeland, in praising the present administration, said that the whole institution was unscrupulously clean. Dr. Smith said the entire heating, wiring and plumbing system were "terrible and unbelievably antequated."

In many places the plaster is falling from the walls of the dark rooms, she said, and a number of the buildings have wooden floors and wooden doors which were locked frm the outside at night, thus leaving no means of escape because of barred windows in case of fire.

In Shaw building, Dr. Smith has slightly relieved the crowded conditions by placing the dining room in the entrance hall. Previously, it had occupied space in a fairly large room which also is the kitchen and laundry from which open three cubby holes containing bat htubs. All bathing water had to be heated and each gir was restricted to two buckets full. The stationary laundry tubs are corroded and many water faucets are missing. Water has seeped in behind the tubs, crumbling the walls.

A plan for the renovation of the school will be presented this afternoon to the directors of the Board of Public Welfare and Dr. Smith said it has been suggested to her that she present the case to the members of the Senate Appropriations Committee in charge of grants for work. She hopes some of the work will be done with WPA funds.

A blueprint of suggested changes in equipment lies on her desk but she said major changes are now under way in the handling of the girls. Because of lack of modern equipment, vocational training has been almost impossible. She hopes to install courses in dressmaking, typing, restaurant cooking, child nursing, beauty parlor work and domestic service.

Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, who places the girls in the institution, spent yesterday morning conferring with Dr. Smith over proposed changes, and in the afternoon she met Mrs. Katherine Ansley, in charge of the emergency lunches in the public schools, to discuss proper diet for the girls.

"On the Fourth of July last year, the day's meals included for breakfast: dried fruit, cereal with skim milk, potatoes, beans, bread and butter. For dinner there were beef, beans, beets, bread and butter and bread pudding. For supper, macaroni, beans and crackers.

"Look at the starch and wonder why the girls were not fil more frequently from such unbalanced menus," she said. "The food was plentiful but poorly chosen."

Ticket-Fixing Critics Scored By Rep. Schulte in House Quiz

Jay-walking pedestrians and critics of so-called ticket "fixing" practices received a verbal lashing from Representative Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, as traffic hearings before the special House sub-committee concluded yesterday.

"All this talk about ticket-fixing is just wasting valuable time," Schulte said. "Ticket-fixing doesn't cause accidents. It's done in every city in the United States—what the hell."

He condemned recent testimony before the sub-committee when charges were hurled that ticket "fixing" was "a common practice in Washington."

"I'm going to be honest," Schulte continued. "If any of my friends come to me and ask me to fix a ticket, it is my duty as a politician to try and do something."

Then he turned to Police Chief Ernest W. Brown and said:

"Any time any of my constituents come here and violate a minor traffic law, do you think I would hesitate to call you? No, I wouldn't. It's done by members of the board of trade, civic organizations and everybody else—even newspapermen."

Tickets in Triplicate.

Maj. Brown then explained that under the present system of issuing traffic tickets, it is impossible to "fix" a charge. The tickets are made out in triplicate form, he said, and each form must be accounted for.

"It is not possible to approach an individual policeman and have him cancel a ticket," Maj. Brown declared. "We have an adjustment office where complaints are heard and meritorious cases are settled without posting collateral or court action."

Schulte then suggested a slogan: "Be a jaywalker and die young."

As the discussion continued, Schulte accused istrict parents of contributing to the deaths of their own children.

"They buy them roller skates and bicycles and send them out onto public streets to get hurt. When a child is injured—or killed—in traffic, it's not the Police Department's fault! it5's the fault of the parent.

Horn-Honking Scored.

Horn-honking "smart Alecs" came in for a share of censorship from Representative Carpenter (Democrat), Kansas, chairman of the sub-committee.

"A lot of these horn tooters get behind out-of-town cars at a red traffic light and honk just to make noise. Something ought to be done to quiet them."

Maj. Brown told the sub-committee that plans for an anti-noise campaign are now being discussed.

After thanking various organizations and previous witnesses who testied before the trapffic sub-committee, Carpenter announced the hearings were completed and the committee stood adjourned.

"I don't know what legislation can be enacted this year to solve Washington's traffic problem," Carpenter said, "but records of these hearings can act as a textbook for motorists for many years to come."

He then cited figures comparing arrests and adjustments. Of 51,913 traffic cases in the calendar year 1933, Maj. Brown said, tickets were canceled or disposed of by warnings in 4,563 cases. In 1934, 5,290 out of a total of 70,536 were settled by adjustment, and in 1935 the comparison was 2,446 out of 77,620 cases.

"Our system of ticket adjustments is in no way an evil and does not contribute in any way to the traffic accident or death rate," Maj. Brown concluded.

"Yeah," Schulte agreed. "All this talk about fixing gives me a pain."

Members of the sub-committee and witnesses alike voiced opinions that recent safety campaigns and educational publicity in traffic matters have greatly aided to decrease accidents, injuries and fatalities.

Jay-Walking Scored.

Schulte's first attack came against the pedestrain.

"A great majority of Washington's accidents are caused by careless pedestrians," he said. They seem to invite disaster and defy motorists to strike. If the driver can be forced to pa ya penalty for recklessness, I say the same should apply to pedestrians."

He told of an automobile drive he took last Sunday, pointing out that pedestrians "looked like they were trying to commit suicide."

"I saw wild driving at times," Schulte declared, "but I saw jawalking pedestrians as well. They actually invited death. The time has come when something should be done to control them."

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer interjected to say that plans to erect pedestrian "walk" lights at several downtown crossings will be completed within a few weeks.

$60,000 Set As D. C. Share In Social Act

Baby Health Stations Plan 50 % Increase in Service.

Care of Crippled Children to Be Dobuled under U. S. Grants.

A 50 per cent increase in the medica lservice furnished at the baby health stations and the doubling of the hospitalization care provided for crippled children are being planned for the District under the maternal and child welfare provisions of the social security act.

This extension of medical services for mothers, infants and crippled children is to be accomplished with funds to be granted the District under the terms of the act and expected to total approximately $60,000.

The act provides for three specific grants, for maternal and child health, for crippled children and for child welfare service. The first two of these are made on a matching basis, while the third is an outright grant of $10,000.

Plan Already Formed.

The plan for maternal and child health has already been submitted to the children's bureau of the Labor Department for approval. Its outstanding features, as outlined by Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer, are:

First, a 50 per cent increase in the care provided by doctors and nurses at the 11 baby health stations in this city. By providing more medical care, the congestion at these baby clinics is to be relieved.

Second, the setting up of a health demonstration in a special area to work for the reduction of the maternity and infant death rates. Such a demonstration is required by the act.

To accomplish these two general aims, the Health Department will receive a flat grant of $20,000 that is assured all States, and an additional $8,376 apportioned on the basis of the number of live births in the District. At present the Department of Health is spending an estimated $50,000 in medical and nursing service for the baby clinics.

The major features of the plan for crippled children which is being devised by Paul Kirby, of the Board of Public Welfare, are still unsettled, pending conferences with officials of the Children's Bureau. However, since the board at present is spending roughly $25,000 a year for hospital care for crippled children and as the grant is expected to amount to approximately that sum, the new program will mean a doubling of the services now provided.

The act provides for a grant of a set $20,000 to each State or the District and an additional sum based on the number of crippled children and their comparative need in the different States. In the District, it is estimated there are from 1,400 to 1,500 crippled children.

No part of the funds will be available for the transportation of crippled children to school, Kirby pointed out. Children Bureau officials have taken the stand that the intent of the act is to expand hospitalization for handicapped children, and that if allotments are made for transportation or other education purposes, the funds would soon be exhausted without accomplishing this aim.

Plan Model Program.

Kirby indicated, however, that one or two assistants might be assigned to each of the schools for crippled children to assist the physiotherapists now stationed there.

The act provides for the grant of $20,000 and an additional sum on the number of crippled children and their comparative need in the different States. In the District, it is estimated, there are from 1,400 to 1,500 crippled children. At present the Board of Public Welfare spends about $25,000 on the care of these children, or just about enough to qualify for a full grant under the matching requirement of the act.

For the child welfare service section of the act, which is designed to check juvenile delinquency, the Board of Public Welfare plans to conduct a model social service program in a single area of the city. A full staff of social workers would be located in this area, with sufficient funds to provide a "100 per cent" social service program. Apart from the immediate value to the children assisted, the program also would show just what can be done in hte way of social welfare work with children with adequate funds.

Miss Watkins to Quit; Kindergarten Pioneer

Director of System Here Since It Was Begun in 1898 Will Retire.

Catherine R. Watkins, director of kindergartens ever since their creation by Congress in 1898, will retire at the end of April, it was learned yesterday. Her retirement, because of the age limit, is to be announced at tomorrow's meeting of the Board of Education.

The only member of the District's original group of kindergarten teachers still in active service, Miss Watkin's career can fairly be described as the living embodiment of the development of the kindergarten system in the District of Columbia for the last 40 years.

When Miss Watkins entered the school service the kindergarten was still an "experiment" and teachers were paid only $400 to $425 a year. Sixteen kindergartens, eight for white children an deight for colored, were set up by Congress in 1898 with an appropriation of $12,000.

After a month as a teacher, Miss Watkins was made director of these 16 kindergartens with a salary of $450 a year. For six years she served in that position and at that salary. In 1905 the success of the kindergarten "experiment" was recognized and legislation was passed formally establishing a kindergarten department in the public schools and providing a salary of $1,400 for a special director.

A leader in the field of progressive education, Miss Watkins was among the first educators in the country to inaugurate a general play festival for children. The first one conducted in this city was held at the National Museum grounds several years before the war. Moving pictures of the children at play were shown at the Panama Exposition in San Francisco during 1913-1914.

In part because of the fame of these children's festivals and partly because of her prestige as one of the country's earliest kindergartners, Miss Watkins was elected president of the International Kindergarten Union for two years, from 1915 to 1917. The union is now known as the Association for Childhood Education and Miss Watkins is a member of the board of editors of the association's journal.

Kindergartens in pre-war days consisted largely of grouping the children in a circle and teaching them as a group, with only limited materials to work with. Today each child is taught as an individual, the children are permitted greater freedom in moving around the room, and their lessons are made more interesting by ample materials and "activity" projects.

The first step in the direction of these new kindergarten methods was taken in District schools in 1917 when Miss Watkins designated several schools to experiment with the project method of teaching. Through the years this method was extended gradually until now scarcely any vestige of the old kindergarten "circle" remains.

MISS CATHERINE WATKINS.

Revolutionizing kindergarten methods required more than classroom changes. Teachers had to be trained in the new ways of instructing their pupils, and for years Miss Watkins conducted after-school classes for the teachers under her direction.

She was also active in parent-teacher work and helped the teachers in her department to organize such associations. One of the methods she adopted to bring parents and teachers closer together was several times each term to hold an "open school" day during which mothers and fathers might visit the classrooms and discuss with the teachers the progress of their children.

A granddaughter of Dr. Tobias Watkins, an Army surgeon, and one of the trustees of Washington's earliest public schools, Miss Watkins was born and has spent virtually her entire life in this city.

She received what would now be termed elementary and high school education at the Incarnation Episcopal Church School. From there, she went to the old Froebel Academy where she studied teaching. She continued her studies at the Phoebe Hearst Kindergarten School for several years, after which she established her own kindergarten. She closed this kindergarten when she entered the District school service.

During her years as kindergarten director, most of her summers were spent taking courses at Teachers College, Columbia University. One summer she studied at Oxford University.

Honk! And Mulcahy Finds Love In the Spring at Sanctuary

The rustle of spring has rekindled an old spark in Mulcahy's breast and now he is a bridegroom. It happened over the week-end. The newlyweds are so, so happy.

Mulcahy's exit from bachelorhood and his entrance into marital bliss with one of his own kind—a Canada goose—forms a romantic interlude in the brief history of Roaches Run. It is the culmination of a year's longing for a mate, the yearning of a goose for a wifely honk and the touch of a gosling's beak.

Ever since March a year ago, when Mulcahy deserted a squadron of northbound emigrants to cast his lot with the wild fowl sanctuary at Roaches Run, he has been the only Canada goose on Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, just below the airport.

He was tricked, as it were, into forsaking the V-shape formation of which he was a part, otherwise he wouldn't be with us today. It was a woman, of course. Her name was Emmie and when Mulcahy spotted her from on high it was love at first flight.

But Emmie was a blue goose. There was a bit of courting, but Nature frowned. It probably would not have been a happy match, anyway, because Emmie's wings were clipped, while Mulcahy was unshorn and ever on the wing.

Spring waxed into summer. To assuage his loneliness, Mulcahy adopted a dozen orphaned mallards. Daily he stood guard outside their pen and none but Paul Hodge, the caretaker, could come near.

Last Thursday night Hodge heard the unmistakable "Honk! Honk!" of migrating Canada geese overhead. Next morning, making his rounds along the Run, who should he see but Mulchay taking a honeymoon dip with his bride. He had hanked her down, just as Emmie more than a year before had honked him down.

"They seem to be an ideal couple," says Hodge.

City Airport Report Is Due For Revival

House to Be Asked to Reject Proposals That Passed Senate.

Compromise Is Proposed Ruling Out All Aid of Federal Funds.

By James D. Secrest.

The dormant District airport conference report will be revived this week and presented to Congress in a new form.

Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, stated yesterday that he will ask the House to reject the report, already accepted by the Senate, and will then seek to work out a new agreement with Senate conferees.

His action is precipitated by the attitude taken by several outspoken members of the House when the report was called up and withdrawn under fire several weeks ago. The objectors insisted that the Federal Government should not share in the cost of the project, regardless of the fact that the Works Progress Administration is financing $40,000,000 worth of airports all over the country.

Nichols Favors Old Report.

At least one of the House conferees, Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, favored trying to bring up the report a second time in the same form as it passed the Senate. He pointed out that the House was in an ugly mood at the time the objections were raised because of a spirited fight over the District supply bill. Nichols is out of the city now, however.

Palmisano said that he had talked with Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, regarding possible compromises. He added that the report may be altered to eliminate the Federal participation of cost on a 50-50 basis. The ultimate cost may be $2,500,000.

Another alternative, he said, is to cut down the $100,000 authorization for the site commission to $10,000, the estimate of the cost of employing technical aids. This would deprive the commission of any funds to obtain options on one or more sites for recommendation to Congress.

As the commission doubtless will file its report after Congress has adjourned, leaving its recommendations hanging fire until next year, prices on the site or sites selected may well skyrocket unless options are obtained.

The bill, as agreed upon by Senate and House conferees, sets up a nine-man commission with authority to make an investigation and to select one or more sites as possible locations for a District-Federal airport.

Seek Quick Action.

The commission would comprise three members of the Senate, three members of the House, and three disinterested persons to be named by the President.

"The principal desire of the conferees is to get the commission organized and the investigaiton under way," said Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, one of the House managers. "The financial problem can be worked out satisfactorily, I believe."

District officials are afraid that, if the commission's expenses, no matter how small, are borne entirely by the District, a precedent will be established that will result in the District bearing the entire cost of the airport.

They point out that the District commissioners have never been enthusiastic over the District airport campaign.

Will H. Hays, "Czar of the Movies," Forecasts Rosy Film Future in Annual Report

Cites Pictures That Mark New Artistic Trend

Criticism Has Been an Aid; Notable Preview Planned; Amusement Jottings.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is pleasant to note that the abstract of the annual report of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., copies of which have just come to hand from both Mr. Hays and Anthony Muto, his Washington rerpresentative, expresses the same view on that part of the "czar of the movies" with regard to the screen's present worth as has been expounded by this column for many months past.

The new motion pictures, reaching greater heights of dramatic, artistic and social values on a general basis of intelligence and good taste, have won larger audiences than the pictures of old, Mr. Hays believes. He further has this to say:

"The new standards of artistry attained by the screen this year are a tribute to the creative personnel of the industry. The constantly higher level of intelligence to which motion pictures are advancing means much to the future of the art and welfare of society.

Co-operation an Aid.

"It is a tribute just as full to the great and growing success which the co-operation given to the industry by educational, social and religious leadership has effected in the standards of motion picture appreciation. The processes of criticism, selection and education have enlared, not restricted, the artistic and dramatic opportunities of the screen; they have increased, not decreased, motion picture attendance.

"In these results lies the true significance of our steady progress of the planned path of self-regulation. It is a path on which the twin necessities of a constantly improving quality of supply and a constantly rising standard of demand are moving forward together It means an industry built upon a wider basis of public service and an art that can rise to the highest social ends."

Mr. Hays points out that the forthcoming productions indicate the continued upward movement in dramatic and artistic trends. In this connection, he singled out for special comment the picturization of "Romeo and Juliet." His pride in the impending productions planned for the new release schedules, however, did not end with the Shakespeare work.

The Future's Promise.

Other leading pictures either in, or approaching production, as cited in the report, include "Mary of Scotland," by Maxwell Anderson; Ouida's "Under Two Flags," "The "Life of Beethoven," "Green Pastures," Marc Connelly's fundamentalist drama of the Old Testament Scriptures; "The Old Maid," last season's Pulitzer Prize winner; Pearl Buck's "The Good Earth," and James Hilton's "Lost Horizon."

That the new season's releases will possess variety and wide range was demonstrated by the citation of these comparatively early releases: "Anthony Adverse," "Captain January," "Captains Courageous," "Charge of the Light Brigade," "Garibaldi," "Good-Bye Mr. Chips," "The Great Ziegfeld," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Mr. Deeds Comes to Town," "Poppy," the picture that brings W. C. Fields back to the screen after a protracted illness; "Rhythm of the Range," "The Road to Glory," "San Francisco," "Show Boat" and "Silas Marner."

Films like "Alaska Bound," "Prairie Schooners," "Nevada," "Ramona," "The Last of the Mohicans," "Sutter's Gold," "Buffalo Bill" and others —pictures with emphasis on our national past, photographed against great natural backgrounds—will continue the movement dramatically to reproduce American historical events, in Mr. Hays' opinion.

With Mr. Hays' opinion this department is entirely in accord.

The inquisitive and investigative Master Norman Pyle has found the first former "Follies" girl now living in Washington to act as hostess at the National Theater premiere of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen production of "The Great Ziegfeld," Sunday night, April 19, at 8:30 o'clock. She is Dorothy Mason Walton, of 1601 Argonne place, where she has made her home for the past nine years following her marriage and retirement from the stage. Her stage career spanned only three years, all of which were spent under the Ziegfeld banner. She appeared as dancer and showgirl in the successive "Follies" productions of 1925, 1926 and 1927.

Another resident of Washington who formerly was under Ziegfeld management is Helen Wood. With a long queue of ticket buyers as audience, the Misses Walton and Wood faced the flashing bulbs of newspaper photographers in the lobby of the National Theater recently, creating no end of curiosity among the onlookers.

"Things to Come."

It was prophesied in this space a few days ago that the Gaumont British film production of "Things to Come," based on H. G. Wells' voluminous book of "The Shape of Things to Come," would be given a noteworthy Washington preview in the near future. Definite announcement now is made that this important event will occur on Tuesday night, April 7, in the Wardman Park Theater at 8:30 o'clock.

The international audience that will be assembled for this occasion will be the first in the United States to view this film, since it will not open in New York for its premiere public showing until four days after the Washington preview.

It is expected that one of the most impressive guest lists ever to attend a function of this kind in the National Capital will be present next Tuesday evening. The British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, and Lady Lindsay already have signified their intention to attend. Representatives of practically all of the foreign embassies and legations likewise are expected to converge on Wardman Park the night of the seventh, together with members of the President's Cabinet, important leaders of both houses of Congress, educational leaders, representatives of the foreign press and critics from nearby cities, such as Wilmington, Baltimore and Richmond.

The usual battery of flood lights, newspaper photographers, broadcast microphones and all of the other concomitants and trimmings will be employed to lend this occasion of a typical Hollywood premiere sion the luster which its importance will deserve.

Arrangements for the preview are in the hands of executives of United Artists, distributors of "Thing to Come" in this country, and Loew's, Inc., in one of whose houses the picture eventually will be given its public exhibition in Washington.

"It happened in Washington," the all-local motion picture recently produced under the joint auspices of the Loew Theaters in Washington and The Washington Post, will be shown as an extra added attraction on the bill with Laurel and Hardy in "The Bohemian Girl," at Loew's Palace Theater beginning Friday. In this entertaining high school story, Senator Henry F. Ashurst and 225 local boys and girls, recruited from practically every high school in the District, appear in the leading roles. The stellar parts are played by Dorothy Ranspeck, 16-year-old daughter of the Georgia Congressman, and James Pendergrast, 18, both of Western High School. The scenes of the picture were "shot" on the campus of George Washington U., in and about various other institutions of learning and in the ballroom of the Ambassador Hotel. "It Happened in Washington" will be shown at the Palace for the full week.

Part of the Show.

When you sit in the Earle Theater next week, beginning Friday, and observe the antics of Glenda Farrell, one of the three blondes with George Brent in "Snowed Under," you may be interested to recall that Miss Farrell made her stage debut in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and has been acting ever since—with time out for schooling. Her screen debut was as Olga in "Little Caesar."

She is a water color artiste, plays the piano and reads; dislikes athletics and any form of strenuous exercise, abstains from sweets and pastries and doesn't have to worry about her weight, which fluctuates between 114 and 116 pounds. Her beauty preparations are limited to soap, water and cold cream. She dislikes golf and bridge and will not drive a car; can't understand why so many people seem to like ice cream.

Miss Farrell's idea of water sports is to loll on a beach, protected from the sun, and paint water colors of the surf rolling in. She has an 8-year-old son, Tommy, whom she says is her sole hobby, although she also has three prize-winning Siamese cats.

Glenda has always made a hit in her screen roles. That is because she is the same on as off. I know this to be true, because she was one of the passengers on that horrendous "Forty-Second Street Special," on which I spent six hours between Baltimore and the Capital on the morning of Franklin D. Roosevelt's inauguration as President of these United States. Glenda is a very grand person, if you like to laugh.

Uncle Sam's G-Men, who crashed through to the first unanimous decision ever rendered the winner in a District one-act play tournament, will be represented in the cast of "Meet the Wife," when this hilarious Lynn Starling comedy is presented by the Pierce Hall Players on Monday and Tuesday, April 13 and 14. Clarence Moore, who played Alexis in "The Game of Chess," winner of the last D. C. tournament, will play the part of Gregory Brown in the Starling farce. Nell Child's a former member of the Cue and Curtain Club of George Washington University, also will be in the cast.

The "Fleet" Sails.

Having been viewed by approximately 135,000 Washingtonians during its run of three and four-sevenths weeks, "Follow the Fleet," costarring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, will end its run at RKO-Keith's Treater tonight, according to breathless information communicated to this desk late yesterday afternoon by Hardie Meakin, the panting manager of the Fifteenth street house.

Tomorrow morning, Wednesday, April 1—and you know what day that is!—RKO-Keith's will bring to the screen the much-discussed Universal production sarring Carole Lombard and bearing the alluring title of "Love Before Breakfast." This film play is a screen adaptation of Faith Baldwin's story of "Spinster Dinner" and boasts the stalwart Preston Foster as its star's leading man.

As a special added attraction, the twenty-fifth anniversary issue of the Pathe News—a summation of all the important headline events of the last quarter-century—will be added to the bill, over and above two short subjects, "Winged Pageantry" and "Going Places."

When Ben Bernie and "all the lads" take possession of the stage at Loew's Fox for the week beginning Friday, there will be a new lad in the troupe. He is Joe Rardin, a one-man band, who is said to outband all the other one-man bands you ever have seen or heard. He has been with the Ol' Maestro only two weeks, but he literally "stopped the show" at every performance.

I am told by Eleanor Smith—"Smitty" to the boys and girls on the drama desks—who long has been the genius lurking behind all of the Bernie publicity—that Joey is a typical small-town youngster who "thumbed" his way to New York in the hope of getting an audition for an amateur hour. Learning one day that Bernie and his band were at the Grand Central Station, Joe dashed over, got there long enough before train time to give Ben a rough idea of what he could do and was hired on the spot. They had to outfit him with the regulation tuxedo and other sartorial fixings for the act after they reached their next stand. "Smitty" tells me that while Joe is only about up to here, he bears a striking facial resemblance to Jimmy Cagney and really has something new to offer in the way of entertainment.

Identification Card.

Joe Rardin was born and rar'd in Athens, Ohio, if you have to know everything.

A Cinema Beauty Absorbs Her Vitamin D

By the crook of her left elbow and the manner of holding the cigarette between the fingers of the right hand, you will identify this, of course, as Marlene Dietrich, one of the most glamorous, to employ a new word, of all the Hollywood sirens. In association with Gary Cooper, John Halliday and a splendid supporting cast, Miss Dietrich will return to the downtown screen on Friday of this week to feature the Metropolitan's bill in the principal feminine role of "Desire." "Desire" is a gay, ornately staged and handsomely costumed continental comedy-romance that affords its costars the finest vehicle either of them has had for many months.

Upon a theme of social justice and the fallibility of judicial procedure in our criminal courts, Maxwell Anderson has woven a drama so tense and bitter in its denunciation of legal chicanery, so inexorable in its quest of suitable revenge for a heinous wrong and so exalted in its brief revelation of a supreme and sacrificial love as to place it among the most powerful dramatic works of this generation.

Couched in the measured cadences of blank verse dialogue and fashioned almost in the Shakespearean tradition, "Winterset" last night disclosed a complete harmony of subject matter and treatment. In this latest of his studious and purposeful plays, Anderson has brought a profound philosophy to bear upon a subject that leans frankly and heavily to the left. He has written, obviously from an unshakable conviction and has lifted his drama at times to sublime heights, even though the scene of his story is the most squalid backwash in New York, under a somber and murky bridgehead on the Manhattan side of the Brooklyn span.

This towering setting has been conceived and executed in entire consonance with the grim import of the author's three acts. Occasional contrast is lent the movement of the drama by moving the action indoors to the barren hovel of the lowly family of Esdras.

Here Gather the Guilty.

In these forbidding surroundings, then, assemble the principal figures in a holdup and murder of a decade ago, for which an innocent man was sent to the electric chair. There comes upon the scene, too, the son of the victim of this tragic miscarriage of justice in search of some clue that will once and for all put his mind at rest by substantiating his faith in his "murdered" father and release him from the relentless necessity of being the retributive voice crying from his martyred parent's grave until vindication shall have been achieved.

In the chill shadows of the bridge, Mio meets a young and beautiful girl, the "first clean, fresh thing he has encountered in ten years," to paraphrase his words. She is the sister of one of the gang that committed the crime for which his father was electrocuted. From this situation spring the crux and the climax of the play—a vehement and cogent indictment of our imperfect judicial system and a tragic exposition of the price Mio and his sweetheart, Miriamne, are doomed to pay for their zeal in seeking only the simple truth of a colossal error of judgment.

Apostrophes Are Spoken.

Into this discussion between the tormented son and the demented judge who rendered the fatal charge to the jury and the verdict that sent an innocent man to his death, now wandering aimlessly about in a vain search for some fragment of corroborative evidence to ease his tortured conscience, the author has seen to it that the judge is permitted to defend his side of the case—but with a defense so confessedly on the side of a warped application of the law as actually to clinch the other side of the argument.

The entire movement of the play is not so ominously tragic as this. There are moments of brisk action and plaintive comedy that relieve the dramatic intensity of speeches that sometimes attain the length and dignity of apostrophes to the playwright's pet convictions regarding what constitute very present evils in our social system. The fact that blank verse has been employed to lend these argumentative portions of the play dignity and power never is permitted to obscure the clarity of the lines or the naturalness of the actor.

Not only is "Winterset" flawlessly written and staged, but, as all of Guthrie McClintic's productions are apt to be, it is acted by a large cast with equal perfection.

Cast Uniformly Able.

While every member of the cast whose name appears in the small-type paragraph preceding these hurried midnight comments is judiciously chosen for his appointed task and contributes notably to the sum total of the play's worth, particular emphasis must be laid upon the finely drawn impersonation of Mio by Burgess Meredith, a young actor with a keen sense of drama and a complete equipment to translate that sense into effective playing. Only once or twice has Author Anderson put speeches in his mouth that seem a trifle too poetic or too profound for one of Mio's admittedly meager education, but by the deftness of his artistry and the facility of his expression, Mr. Meredith makes even these seem both logical and "in character."

Scarcely less able in her rounding opt of the drama's full import is that enigmatic young actress known merely by the name of Margo. Ingenuous, but still impetuous, envisioning a life she never yet has stasted and staunch in her fidelities to family, newly found lover and the simple principles expounded by her father, the Miriamne whom Margo brings to the pivotal moments of "Winterset" is a vibrant, appealing and exotic young woman. The part seems almost to have been written expressly for its present incumbent, so excellently does she play it.

As the elder Esdras, Anatole Winogradoff, in the character of the patriarch through whose lips the playwright expounds a great deal of his profoundest philosophy, offers an especially praiseworthy portrayal. Myron McCormick, Harold Johnsrud and Theodore Hecht, as sisister figures in the play's development, and Abner Biberman, as a vociferous radical, also acquit themselves with something more than ordinary credit.

Here, in short, is a coalition of all the elements of drama that go to fulfill the loftiest purposes of the theater to such degree as wholly to warrant the selection of "Winterset" by the Critics Circle as the best play of the current season.

The specification of the current season seems to be an unfortunate limitation—as was noisely indicated by the applause of last night's capacity audience following the fall of the final curtain. They would have accorded its superiority a far broader temporal span.

THE EIGHTH WOMAN
Why She is Always Herself

All women are not born "free and equal," Nature being what it is. Many readers of this newspaper know this to their sorrow. A woman's days are not all alike. There are difficult days when some women suffer severely.

There didn't used to be anything to do about it. Eight million had to suffer month after month. Today, a million have accepted the relief to be had from Midol.

As a rule, it is a knowing woman who keeps that little aluminum case tucked in her purse. One who knows what to wear, where to go, how to take care of herself, how to get the most out of life. That "eighth woman" who has learned to rely on Midol!

A smart woman doesn't try every pill or tablet somebody says is good for periodic pain. But Midol is recommended by specialists. It can form no habit because it is not a narcotic. But Midol is effective even when the pain has reached its height. It's effective for hours, so two tablets should see you comfortably through your worst day.

Mid-Atlantic Golfers Have Choice of 2 Courses for Open Trials

Champs Face Rinaldi's Tonight

Throng to See One of Best Fives in Nation Play at Tech Gym

Eastern High Will Meet All-Star Team in Opening Tilt.

YOU don't have to go to the Olympic tryouts in New York to see one of the best of amateur basketball teams perform.

You can see one of them in action tonight at Tech High School's gym where the Globe Refiners, of McPherson, Kans., National A. A. U. champions, engage Rinaldi Tailors, Washington's best.

Game time is 8:30, and a capacity crowd, including some 300 Kansans, are expected to be on hand.

Before the Globe Refiners, hailed as the tallest team in the world—for there isn't a player on the team less than 6 feet 1—and Rinaldi monopolize the spotlight, Eastern High School and an all-star Government team composed of former college stars will clash in the preliminary at 7:30.

Representative Jack Houston, of the Fifth Congressional district, who attended Wichita University, where most of the McPherson giants receive their education, will toss up the first ball. Two Kansas Senators and five other Representatives have been invited to participate in the pregame ceremonies.

Five All-Americans on Team.

The champions, coached by Gene Johnson, a former Wichita University basketball mentor, were to have arrived last night, but were delayed, and will not reach Washington until 7:40 this morning. They will arrive on the B. & O. Railroad, and there will be a reception committee from the District A. A. U. to greet them.

Five All-Americans will make up the Jayhawks' starting line-up. Joe Fortenberry, 6-foot 3 center, will be the marked man tonight, for he will be pitted against Hal Kiesel, Rinaldi's great center, who is several inches smaller, and Mr. Kiesel's work will be cut out for him. Hal did a great job for Rinaldi in Denver during the national championship which McPherson won, and will face the tallest man he has ever jumped against. Fortenberry twice has been All-American. He hails from Wichita Texas Teachers College, of Canyon, Tex.

At forward for McPherson will be Francis Johnson, brother of the coach, and high-point scorer in the tournament, and Tex Gibbons, Bill Wheatley and Jack Ragland will patrol the guard posts.

The Kansans will average 6-feet-5 in height.

Regular Team Will Play.

Coach Davey Keppel, of Rinaldi, will use the same team that started play against Panhandle Aggies and Noblitt Sparks, of Columbus, Ind., in the National. With Kiesel at center, little Bobby Lucas, voted the most sensational forward in the tournament, and Bernie Lieb, former Catholic University captain, will be at forward; Carroll Shore and Ollie Tipton, two former Central stars, will play guard.

McPherson will have Charlie Bailey, Vern Vaughn, Willard Schmidt and Harry Dowd in reserve, and Rinaldi, Bill Noonan, Pickles Walker, Sammy Hook and Cliff Keyser.

Rinaldi held a workout at George Washington's gym last night and the boys showed plenty of passing and shooting stuff.

Eastern, which leaves tomorrow to participate in the Glens Falls championship, will start Bill Buckholtz and Chick Hollidge, forwards; Buddy Shaner, center, and Lavalle Dean and Reds Scheible.

The Government stars will be composed of such aces as Bob Freeman, of Penn; Gene Augusterfer and Abe Rosefeld, of Catholic University; Jimmy Howell, of George Washington.

Quigley Will Officiate At Olympic Cage Finals

St. Marys, Kans., March 30 (AP).—Ernest C. Quigley, widely known football and basketball official and for 23 years a National League umpire, said today he had been selected as one of the officials to serve in the Olympic basketball finals this week-end in New York City.

A Left on the Way to Its Mark

Cowboy Scott (right) sends in one of his telling blows as he decisioned Lew Massey at Turner's Arena last night.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla., March 30.

AS THE Nats prepare to pull up stakes here tomorrow for the northward trek, the stepchild of the Washington training camp has found new favor in the eyes of Manager Bucky Harris.

Catcher Cliff Bolton, the bottle-legged little backstop who for more than a month rated as Harris' prime disgust and pet peeve, has now won reinstatement as an integral part of the Washington ball club.

POVICH.

Two weeks ago Bolton's hold on the No. 1 catching job was perilously thin. No shining example as a defensive catcher, his batting, his chief recommendation, had fallen off to a whisper. He was still carrying the fat accumulated during a winter of ease in his North Carolina home and he showed neither the disposition nor the ability to shed it.

Their patience with Bolton exhausted, Harris and Owner Clark Griffith scanned the waiver lists for an acceptable catcher. They were panicky at the thought of going into the season with Bolton as their chief protection behind the bat and they did not disguise their fears. And failure to acquire a catcher did not heighten their regard for Bolton.

But during the past week they have hastily revised their estimates. Bolton, seemingly at the end of his rope in the big leagues, began to hit. Doubles and triples began to bounce off the bat that led every minor league in which he had ever played. Almost magically he recovered his hitting form and with it a sudden improvement in his defensive play.

This morning as the Nats filled an open date with a prolonged workout at Tinker Field, Bolton opened wide the eyes of Manager Harris.

At the end of the workout, Harris was obviously pleased. "I don't know what's come over Cliff, but he's snapped out of it. Those double steals other clubs have been getting away with against him were pitiful, but the guy is improved.

"Today we had a lot of speed out there on the bases trying those double steals against Cliff and nobody got away with one. He was cutting down Jess Hill, Dee Miles, Carl Reynolds and Jake Powell all morning. I had a long talk with him before the workout and pointed out that he was timing his throws wrong and letting the man on third get too long a lead. I don't believe he ever gave any thought to that before.

"But he has a fair arm and he caught on quickly. If he can do that for us during the season, the clubs that used to get away with those double steals on us are going to be in for some surprises.

"We are looking for a first-string catcher, but Bolton can be our No. 1 man if he gets serious. You can't overlook a guy who hits like he does. What we want now is a second-string catcher we can shove in there if Cliff gets hurt. That's my chief catching worry."

The Nats' farewell to Orlando tomorrow will take the form of a game with the Cincinnati Reds at Tinker Field. Tomorrow night they entrain with the Reds for a three-game tour through Georgia before stopping at Chattanooga for two games with their farm hands.

Just when Harris was beginning to give up all hope that any of his younger pitchers would prove of help to the team, Kendall Chase and Joe Bokina have come through with impressive performances.

Bokina at this writing has ousted Dick Lanahan as the No. 1 rookie pitcher and Chase, after a slow start, held the Louisville club to six hits on Sunday, curbing the wildness that threatened his retention by the club.

Scott Defeats Massey on Decision

Philadelphian's Start Is Fast But He Slows Under Texan's Drive.

By Bill McCormick.

A HUMAN trench mortar—in the person of Lew Massey, of Philadelphia—and a siege gun—one Howard Scott, a Texan—had it out in the feature at Turner's Arena last night. At the end of ten rounds of heavy firing, the trench mortar had fired all its ammunition and the siege gun was firing at both long and short range to take a unanimous decision.

A few minutes after the fight started, practically all of the 1,200 spectators would have unanimously agreed that Massey's superior infighting would win him the decision—in fact, many already were taking it for granted that he would put the snore on the angular Texan.

Scott's Backers Shocked.

The one-sided beginning was somewhat of a shock to Scott advocates. As long as he could stay away from the wily Massey he did well enough, sending Lew's head back with a left jab and rocking him with right crosses to the head. But at that time Scott found it almost impossible to stay away from Massey, and meeting the Massey of early rounds in close was comparable to embracing a buzz saw. Thus it went for more than five rounds, with Scott drinking up punishment in the brisket.

Then Lew tired, and as his strength waned Howard seemed to gather new stamina from somewhere. He peppered Massey with lefts and rights to the head, several times having him on the verge of a knockout from looping rights to the head. At the finish, the winner was landing at will on almost any part of Massey's body he chose as a target.

Fans Boo Decision.

Frankie Mills took a close and muchly booed decision from Pete Galiano in a rough-and-tumble eight-round semifinal. The two willing welterweights worked in furious spurts and indulged in some very hectic toe-to-toe slugging.

Mills, apparently the better boxer of the pair, outsmarted Pete in most of the exchanges, but as his strength seemed to fade in the closing rounds he wilted almost completely out of the picture several times. A draw decision might have been justified, but Referee Charley Reynolds' vote for Galiano was vetoed by the ballots of Judges O. Usinger and Bob Eller for Mills.

Joe Bruno outfumbled Mike Tardugno to take a split decision in a mauling six-round preliminary. Such clean punches that found their marks were launched by Bruno.

Joe Doty and Angelo Meola labored furiously to a draw in one four-round opener. In another, Frankie Fulco pounded his way to a decision over Al Dintaman.

Horse Dope Case To Supreme Court

Horse-race doping reached the Supreme Court yesterday when Government lawyers gave that judicial body a detailed accounting of the use of narcotics in racing in a brief asking the court to deny the appeals of three horsemen sentenced under Federal narcotic laws.

Appeals to the highest court had been made by Joe F. Patterson, Robert Wingfield and Horace Moore, employes of the Audley Farms of Virginia. They had been sentenced to 6-month jail terms and fines of $250 and $1,000.

The court was told that two of the men were caught at a Detroit track "in the act of placing a syringe, which contained a solution of heroin in the mouth of a horse."

Attorneys for the men contended that the trial judge had violated their constitutional rights because he "had directed" the jury to return a verdict of guilt in certain charges.

Harris' Hopes For Line-up Come True

By a Staff Correspondent.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 30.—Bucky Harris, it seems, called his shot with great accuracy two months ago when he announced the 1936 batting order of his Washington Club even before the team trekked South. In only one position has he apparently failed to hit the mark.

Harris predicted early in February that the Nats would go to bat in the 1936 pennant race as follows: Hill, leftfield; Lewis, third base; Myer, second base; Powell, centerfield; Travis, short stop; Miles, rightfield; Kuhel, first base, and Bolton, catcher. That lineup apparently represented his highest hopes, and it may yet be the order in which the Nats will go to bat.

Three of the changes in the 1936 Washington team which Harris visualized now appear permanent. Jesse Hill has unquestionably won the leftfield post; young Buddy Lewis is something of a fixture at third base and Cecil Travis has made the change from third base to shortstop in a manner to cause general elation in the Washington camp.

The only guy who apparently has failed Harris is Dee Miles, and his case is not yet decided. It was Harris' fond hope that the speedy Miles would improve his fielding and hitting to the extent that he would replace Johnny Stone in right field, but thus far the veteran Stone is clinging to his job with great ease.

But in recent games even Miles is beginning to justify some of Harris' hopes. Still a bit ragged in his outfield play despite diligent attention to the coaching of Earl McNeely, Miles has begun to display the power at bat that stamped him as one of the most dangerous hitters in the history of the Southern Association, a league that he led in runs driven in and in runs scored. It is no secret here that Harris prefers the presence of a .300-hitting Miles in the line-up to that of a .320-hitting Stone whose play inclines toward the sluggish.

Hill has justified Harris' every hope. The problem of the lead-off position in the batting order which vexed Harris throughout 1935 appears completely solved in Hill's presence. The former Yankee, the fastest man on the team, has shaped up her as ideal for the job. His ability to get on base by walks and bunts as well as hits gives the Nats a tremendous threat. And his ability to go and get 'em in the outfield rounds out an outer defense that last year was seriously handicapped by the presence of Heinie Manush in the same position.

In the second spot in the batting

Grant Given Battle In Houston Net Play

Davis Cup Player Extended to 3 Sets by Trum.

Houston, Tex., March 30 (AP).—Bryan Grant, Davis Cup player from Atlanta, had to go three sets to vanquish Arthur Trum, of Houston, today in the first round of the annual River Oaks tennis tournament here. The score was 7—5, 3—6, 6—1.

Most of the other stars had less trouble. Karl Schroeder, of Sweden, eliminated G. Lederer, of Rice, 6—3, 6—2, while Charles Harris, of West Palm Beach, Fla., a seeded entrant, defeated Bob Allen, of the University of Oklahoma, 6—1, 6—3, in another first-round match.

Head Winds Slow Florida-Cuba Race

Starlight Still in Lead Ten Miles Ahead of Field.

By the Associated Press.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 30.—Yachts in the seventh annual St. Petersburg-Havana sailing classic were bucking head winds late today and progressing slowly on their 284-mile run to Havana.

Still well in the lead was Starlight, 44-foot cutter owned and skippered by Al Fay, of Houston, Tex., at 5 p. m. She was 40 miles north of Dry Tortugas, gateway to the treacherous Florida Straits. She was expected to pass through the channel around midnight.

Up the coast 10 miles the 45-foot schooner, Haligonian, another Clearwater boat, owned and skippered by L. S. Ruder, was gradually closing in the gap. Only 1 mile behind the Sately Vamarie, 72-foot staysail ketch and scratch boat in class A division; The Babe, Hugh M. Matheson's 30-foot cutter, and the Sleek Shellback, Robert J. Newman's 58-foot schooner from New Orleans, waged a nip-and-tuck battle.

Eisinger to Broadcast.

Fred Eisinger, Bill Coyle's publicity agent, will substitute for him tonight over his WMAL Sports Parade at 6:30 o'clock.

Bill, who returned from Orlando, Fla., last night, is taking one more night to recuperate from the blazing Southern sun. He will go on the air as usual tomorrow night at 6:30.

Friedman Tied With Dunlap For Lead

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 30.—George T. Dunlap, jr., four-time holder of the title, and Sam Friedman, jr., youthful golfer from Tuscaloosa, Ala., led a field of 32 into the championship flight of the annual North and South amateur tourney by shooting 73 each to tie for medal honors.

In third place was the veteran Francis Ouimet, of Brookline, Mass., who turned in a 77 on the difficult No. 2 course, although it was his first tournament play of the season.

Out of the huge starting field of more than 175 players, these and 6 others who shot 79s were the only players to break 80.

At 79 were Charles Foster Brown, jr., of Maplewood, N. J.; Arthur Lynch, of Mamaroneck, N. Y.; A. Marshall, of Cincinnati; Andrew McNair, of London, England; A. C. Giles, of New York City, and J. O. Levinson, of Kennebunk, Me.

Dunlap, slender former amateur champion from Garden City, Long Island, started out over his home course in pursuit of his fifth North and South crown with a brilliant 33 for the outgoing nine, but he faltered coming back, and needed 40 strokes on the in nine.

On the other hand, Friedman, a member of the University of Alabama golf team two years ago, got stronger as he went around, needing only 35 on the in nine against his 38 going out. Friedman was once a semifinalist in the Southern Amateur.

Five consecutive three-putt greens were largely responsible for Ouimet's failure to do better than 77. The bad break for the erstwhile open and amateur titlist started on his second hole, and he scored a 40 going out.

Page Hufty, of Chevy Chase Club, Washington, D. C., qualified with his 40—42—82. Hufty is a former North and South champion.

Orlando in Doubt As 1937 Nat Camp

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, Fla., March 30.—The Washington's Club return to Orlando next year was still in doubt today following the failure of the Orlando Chamber of Commerce to act on the guarantee demanded by Clark Griffith, but a decision is expected tomorrow.

Griffith has announced that the Washington team would train here in 1937 if the chamber of commerce posted the same $3,500 guarantee the club was given this year. The absence from the city of Mayor Estes postponed the meeting of the officials scheduled for today.

Approval of Orlando as a training base was expressed by Griffith, who revealed, incidentally, that he has not yet received the $3,500 check guaranteed him by the local chamber of commerce this year.

Golfer Taken Ill.

Sites Are Aid to District Entrants

Cruickshank Only Star in This Section Who Is Exempted.

By Dave Herman.

FOR the first time, Middle Atlantic golfers can choose between Richmond and Baltimore for the National Open qualifying trials, it was revealed yesterday when the United States Golf Association announced the 28 courses where the 36-hole tests would be conducted on May 11.

In Baltimore the trials will be conducted at Hillendale Country Club, and in Richmond at Lakeside Country Club. Richmond is one of three new sectional districts on the schedule, the others being Troy, N. Y., and Birmingham, Ala. Two years ago the qualifying event was held at Lakeside.

160 to Be in Field.

Players exempted, plus a number of golfers from Great Britain and Canada, and the successful participants in the qualifying trials will make up the field of 160 for the National Open proper scheduled at the famous Baltusrol Golf Club, Springfield, N. J., June 4, 5, 6. The last big championship held there was in 1926, when George von Elm defeated Bobby Jones for the National Amateur crown.

Announcement that Richmond had been selected along with Baltimore for the qualifying tussle means that Washington pros will have a good chance of carrying off the bulk of places open at each front. Last season Al Houghton, Cliff Spencer and Leo Walper, all District pros, made the grade in a big Washington sweep at Suburban, Baltimore.

Three Places May Be Open.

Roland Mackenzie, Congressional pro, competed in the Philadelphia sector last year and won himself a place. He may elect to return this season. The 1936 Philly trials are scheduled at Aronimink Golf Club. It is highly possible that Roland will try his fortunes in the trials at Ponte Verda Country Club, Jacksonville Beach, where he is the winter pro and holds the course record.

From three to four places are expected to be open at Hillendale, and at least three at Lakeside. The number of entries from, and the playing strength of, each district will be used as the bases for allocating qualifying berths.

Among those who will be bidding for a qualifying place is Wiffy Cox, of Kenwood, who has been on the threshhold of several National Open titles.

Districts—Country club, Troy, N. Y.; Wampanoag, Hartford, Conn.; Seawane Club, Hewlett, L. I.; Aronimink, Philadelphia; Hillendale, Baltimore; Lakeside, Richmond; Charlotte, N. C.; Atlanta A. C. (East Lake), Atlanta, Ga.; Ponte Vedra, Jacksonville Beach, Fla.; country club, Birmingham; Belle Meade, Nashville, Tenn.; Kenwood, Cincinnati; Oakmont, Pittsburgh; Park Country Club, Buffalo, N. Y.; Canterbury Golf Club, Cleveland; Meadowbrook, Detroit; Olympia Fields, Chicago; Maple Bluff, Madison, Wis.; Golden Valley, Minneapolis; Omaha Field Club, Omaha; Milburn, Kansas City, Mo.; Westwood, St. Louis; Oklahoma City Golf Club, Brook Hollow, Dallas, Tex.; Lakewood, Denver; California, Culver City, Calif.; Burlingame, San Francisco; Oswego, Portland, Oreg.

Making a Hit Out of a Bunt

Red Rolfe, Yankee third baseman, makes one of those rare slides into first to beat out a bunt against the Cubs. Note ball, which arrived a split-second too late to Larry French, Cub pitcher, who is covering the bag. First Baseman Phil Caveretta made the pick-up. The Cubs won, 4 to 3.

Odds Favor Cubs, Tigers to Repeat

Zeke Bonura, White Sox Holdout, May Be Shunted Out of League.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, March 30.—The Chicago Cubs and the Detroit Tigers were made the favorites at 8 to 5 to repeat their major league pennant victories in odds posted today by Betting Commissioner Charles Burke, successor to the late Tom Kearney.

The St. Louis Cardinals were made the second choice to the Cubs in the National League at 2 to 1. Other odds quoted were New York, 4 to 1; Pittsburgh, 8 to 1; Brooklyn, 20; Cincinnati, 40; Philadelphia, 100, and Boston, 200.

Burke made the Boston Red Sox the runner-up choice to the Tigers in the American League at 2 to 1 and the New York Yankees the favorites for third place at 4 to 1. Cleveland was held at 8 to 1, with the second division teams quoted as follows: Chicago, 30 to 1; Washington and St. Louis, 40 to 1, and Philadelphia, 200 to 1.

Chicago, March 30.—Henry (Zeke) Bonura, holdout first baseman of the Chicago White Sox, may find himself traded to a National League club, or released to the minors before the end of the week.

Bonura, along with Babe Herman, Cincinnati Reds outfielder, and William Ben Chapman, centerfielder for the Yankees, are the last of the 1936 holdout brigade. The Deans—Dizzy and Daffy—capitulated. Big Hank Greenberg, another major holdout, finally joined the world champion Detroit Tigers, after getting a contract calling for a reported $20,000 a year. But Bonura is sticking to his demands.

Waivers have been obtained on the big New Orleans slugger from the other seven clubs in the American League, it was authoritatively learned tonight. Zeke, who valued his services at $12,500, an increase of $5,000 over his 1935 contract, undoubtedly will be shocked to learn that the other seven clubs in the league refused to pay the waiver price of $7,500 for his contract.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 30.—The New York Yankees made a clean sweep of their five-game exhibition series with the Boston Bees by taking a 5-4 decision in ten innings today.

The Yanks got away in front but were forced to put over the tying run in the ninth after the Bees had jumped on young Spurgeon Chandler, rookie right-hander for three runs in the eighth. Lou Gehrig led the Yankees' ten-hit attack with a triple, two singles and a pair of walks in five times at bat. His nonth-inning single, scoring Red Rolfe from third, tied the score.

Bradenton, Fla., March 30.—Wild Bill Hallahan lived up to his name in the early innings today and the Chicago Cubs took a lead but later the St. Louis Cardinals left-hander hit a double, his mates followed suit and the National League champions were defeated in an exhibition game, 10 to 4.

Clearwater, Fla., March 30.—The Boston Red Sox and the Brooklyn Dodgers battled 13 innings to a 6-6 tie today before being forced to call off hostilities on account of darkness. Stan Bordagaray and Jim Bucher sent the Dodgers away in the lead with home runs but the Sox fought back to tie the score in the ninth. Each team put over a run in the tenth.

D. C. Dollars Are 'Good' At Track

'Longshot' Course Again Features Daily Double; Special Train.

By Walter Haight.

A GREAT many of our otherwise normal citizens are straining at the barrier today, for the morrow brings the so-called sport of kings back to the District area. After four months of participating in the grand old game through the medium of charts, stories and occasional pictures from Florida, California and Texas, Washington's race fans will greet the horses in the flesh as nearby Bowie opens the 1936 season in the East.

Despite the fact that Andrew J. Cummings, secretary of the Laurel track, predicted that "the District would go broke" if allowed to have a racing plant of its own, Maryland will not turn away any District patrons tomorow. Washington fans, as usual, are expected to comprise at least half of the 10,000 persons to visit the Prince Georges County course.

Bowie always has been the most popular of Maryland tracks with the District turf colony. There's something about the place that has stamped it as the "homey" track, and so tomorrow the Defense highway will be crowded again as 2:30 o'clock post time nears.

Pennsylvania to Run Trains.

Deprived of rail transportation to the plant with the discontinuance of the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis line last year, Bowie regains passenger service tomorrow when the Pennsylvania Railroad inaugurates race specials from Union Station. By renting part of the old W., B. & A. tracks, the Pennsy will have through service direct to the track, leaving here at 1:10 p. m. The usual buses will operate from downtown starting points.

Barring falling weather before post time, Bowie will have a lightning-fast track. The racing oval has been worked daily for the past month and horses have made excellent time over it in morning trials.

Bowie has a reputation as a "longshot" track mainly due to its spring meeting, which brings together horses which wintered hereabouts and those which raced in the South and West. There is a gamble in both cases. Horses being shipped in may have lost their form in transportation and the stay-at-homes may not have reached racing form.

Local Horses in Fair Shape.

Despite the bitter winter, the "local" horses are reported in fair shape. The snows and freezing weather broke early enough to give trainers a month in which to drill their charges out of doors. Many of the topnotch riders arrived in this section early to put the edge on the horses that are to be raced in Maryland during the next two months.

As usual, the Inaugural Handicap, the opening-day feature, appears to be an "open" race, and has drawn a field of speedsters, including Dogmata, Dreel and Good Harvest, from the Vanderbilt barn, which produced the winner last year. Singing Wood, Bright Haven, Star Porter and Happy Go are among the others in the favored group.

Bowie, first to have the daily double in Maryland, again will feature the twin betting on the first and third races.

Unfortunately, Bowie will not be able to use the photographic finish at this meeting. The apparatus will not be available in Maryland until the opening of Havre de Grace.

If given a "break" oy the weather, Bowie should provide ten days of excellent sport.

Hayes Awarded Letter.

Providence, R. I., March 30.—Oliver W. Hayes, of Washington, D. C., was one of ten varsity swimmers awarded insignia for their efforts during the past season on Brown University tank team. Hayes is a junior.

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al:

Here's some statistics on the Beat-Bill-Bennings Contest: Total number of entries—11,128; those who picked seven winners—2; six winners—8; five winners—75; four winners—209; three winners—1,127; two winners—2,991; one winner—3,715, and those who were shut out—3,001. I tried to keep track of the exact number who beat Bill Bennings but I lost the paper with the figure on it. Believe that and I'll tell you another one. However, I will say that Bill Bennings was beaten, good and proper. Today, without the contestants shooting at me, I came through with four winners and several days during the contest I have had my share, but was too busy with the slips to do any back-slapping. Many of the contest winners were in last night to collect their rewards. This is last day at Tropical Park for the Benningites. Tomorrow we will be shooting at the horses from the Bowie angle and I'll be seeing you down by the rail at the judges' stand.

BILL.

First race—Tudor Queen ran a promising race last out and only little improvement is necessary here. Joe Renick should prove a satisfactory rider. Scintilla and Freeman to take care of the others.

Third race—Zulu Lad has been threatening to win a race of this sort and may be in a running mood today. Queen Vic has early speed and the light weight, plus Hanford's riding, may find her close at the finish. Centermarch can better that last.

Fourth race—Hurtle, with Wayne Wright to do the riding, will be in the thick of this battle and I'm going to take my chances on a victory. Jay Bee Jay and Winon to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Letter Box seems to have found a promising spot in this field. She will have Dame Quickly to beat. Jowie defeated better than these last year and may awake with a bang.

Best bet—Hurtle.

FRANK SMITH	(Stafford)	110	5	6	6	5ʰ	5½	6	15.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARLESTA, $3.10, $2.40, $2.20; TUMBLING GLASS, $5.30, $2.20; BROWN DAVID, $2.20.

CARLESTA, a keen factor early, moved into an easy lead when leaving the backstretch, opened up at will and held sway to the close. TUMBLING GLASS, hurried stoutly from the beginning, weakened after making his bid at the turn. BROWN DAVID saved ground and closed gamely in the late stages.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward; maidens. Went to post at 2:53. Off at 2:54. Start good (chute). Won driving; place, same. Winner, Mrs. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAPLE QUEEN, $7.00, $3.30, $2.20; PAGEANTRY, $4.00, $2.30; EXAGGERATION, $2.50.

MAPLE QUEEN moved into the lead soon after the start, raced MISS ALINE into defeat in the first five furlongs, responded readily entering the homestretch after saving ground and outstayed PAGEANTRY under strong urging. PAGEANTRY, timidly ridden in the early racing while racing on the inside, was taken to the outside after disposing of MISS ALINE and closed full of run. EXAGGERATION went prominently and was going gamely when the final test came.

THIRD RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 2-year-old maiden fillies. Went to post at 3:25. Off at 3:29. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, Mrs. A. Bismarck's ch. f. GLOSS	(Hardy)	113	1	9	9	9	9	17.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIS ROYAL, $6.70, $3.60, $2.90; QUEEN FULL, $3.70, $3.50; JEANNE FETZKO, $9.70.

SIS ROYAL, hustled into a contending position, came around the pacemakers when reaching the home stretch, then came out steadily after displacing QUEEN FULL. Latter, hard ridden to shake off ODD GIRL, saved ground, but could not withstand the winner. JEANNE FETZKO followed within striking distance of the leaders in the early running, then closed with excellent courage in the final drive.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 3:57. Off at once. Start good and fast. Won easily; place, driving. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:13 4-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
THRUSTER	(I.Hanford)	115	3	1	2¹½	2½	1³	1²½	$1.55

MORLUTE	(Kastner)	96	1	2	1¹½	1½	2ʰ	4	2.20

Two-dollar mutuels paid—THRUSTER, $5.10, $3.20, out; BALMACAN, $4.10, out; CREOLE BIRD, out.

THRUSTER, following in close attendance of the pacemaker until reaching the turn, took command readily when put to a drive, saved ground and had something in reserve at the close. BALMACAN, in the thick of contention all the way, came through on the inside when reaching the home stretch and outfinished CREOLE BIRD. Latter moved up fast midway of the turn after being outpaced, but weakened in the closing furlong while in front.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:23. Off at 4:25. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, Liberty Lane Stable's br. m. (6), by Purchase—Auray. Trained by W. E. Jones. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:48 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS PURRAY, $19.80, $6.90, $6.20; EL PUMA, $4.20, $3.00; DONNAHONA, $6.60.

MISS PURRAY sprinted into an easy lead at the first turn, was taken under slight reserve for the first six furlongs, rallied willingly when shaken up and held on resolutely to withstand EL PUMA. Latter, rated off the pace until reaching the final turn, moved up gamely when put to a drive, but was unable to gain on the winner during the final drive. DONNAHONA, kept within striking distance of the leaders, finished gamely when forced to a drive.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds Went to post at 4:55. Off at 4:56½. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, Silver Stock Farm's b. f. (3), by Peter Hastings—Lady Von. Trained by A. E. Silver. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SWEET SUSAN, $13.20, $3.80, $3.30; PIPES PAL, $2.70, $2.30; JERRY H., $6.30.

SWEET SUSAN was not hurried when PIPES PAL was rushed through on the inside to take command entering the back stretch, moved up stoutly when put to a drive in the last half mile, wore the pacemaker down when reaching the home stretch, then withstood a hard drive to the end. PIPES PAL was crowded back going to the first turn, went through on inside to take command entering the back stretch, opened up a long lead, but failed to withstand the winner when the real test came. JERRY H. held a forward position and held on strongly in the closing drive to stall off JOAN D.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:25. Off at 5:25½. Start poor. Won easily; place driving. Winner, W. V. Faschetti's br. g. (6); by Sand Mole—Comedie d'Amour. Trained by M. E. Costello. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:50.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SALUT D'AMOUR, $4.70, $3.50, $2.70; PROHIBITION, $6.00, $5.50; THATCHESTA, $6.70.

SALUT D'AMOUR sprinted into an easy lead going to the first turn, was steadied until reaching the home stretch, then drew out when mildly shaken up. PROHIBITION, in closest pursuit of the winner from the beginning, was unable to menace after being put to strong urging. THATCHESTA saved ground throughout, but was easily best of the others.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:56. Off at 5:58. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, Philmore Sanford's b. or br. h. (5); by Mackenzie II—Windigo. Trained by Philmore Sanford. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:50.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TAUNTON, $4.50, $2.70, $2.20; PAY RACK, $3.50, $2.70; THE AENEAD, $2.80.

TAUNTON, going in his best form and forwardly placed in the early racing, swung to the outside when engaging the pacemaker and finished determinedly to get up in the last strides. PAY RACK was hurried to the front, went along under slight restraint until challenged, then finished under a hard ride when forced to a drive. THE AENEAD was hard ridden while saving ground from the start, but could not engage the leaders at any stage.

Wood Will Face Cornell Nine Today

Terps Will Use Same Team That Beat Ohio State; Game at 4 o'Clock.

GEORGE WOOD, the left-handed Napoleon of Maryland's pitching corps, will be on the hillock again this afternoon when the Terrapins tangle with Cornell's diamond forces at 4 o'clock at College Park.

Cornell, in a preliminary survey of talent at hand, does not rank as highly as it did last year because of the large number of sophomores on the squad, but Coach Paul Eckley hopes to find a few gems in the rough among his rookies.

Dan Lindheimer and Jack Batten, the only experienced pitchers on the squad, probably will hurl the two games against Maryland, with Bob Baker and Jack Lozier ready to back them up.

The infield will be selected from Capt. Jack Kreimer, second base who is the only man assured of his position; Al Gally and Bob Florence, first basemen; Ed Scharhrer and Walter Johnson, shortstops; Bibber McNamara and Bob Meagher, third basemen, and Worthington Dodd, utility.

Willis in Debut.

With Wood on the firing line, Coach Burt Shipley will start the same team that turned back Ohio State last week. Waverly Wheeler, Charlie Keller, Jack Stonebraker and Gordon Freas will be

Drama

In Which We See One of the Dodgers' Strategy Confabs.

By Jimmie Powers.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Item: Clearwater, Fla., March 30.—Brooklyn will hold a dressing-room conference before each game to discuss the afternoon's strategy, it was announced by Manager Casey Stengel here today.

Scene—Ebbets Field clubhouse. Players are in dishabille. There is an odor of wintergreen liniment and discarded undershirts. The bat boy scurries about bearing livid red, yellow and green bottles of soda pop. The phone rings intermittently. Locker doors rattle and slam. As the curtain rises, Manager Stengel, seated on a bench, front center, is talking.

Stengel: "And so I say, if you outthink 'em, you'll outscore 'em."

Stengel: "Feed Terry low and outside. If he crowds the plate, pitch at his head, he'll duck."

"Mungo: "Speaking of ducks, I got me some fine mallards this winter using No. 4 shot. No. 6s with my choke barrels were too light. Just tickled their rumps."

Stengel (sweetly sour): "What did we fool Ott on last time?"

Stengel (roaring): "How did we fan Ott?"

Phelps (pouting): "Slow balled 'm."

Zachary: "Burnt child . . . ssumpff . . . avoids the fire."

(All stare as Lindstrom seats himself in dead silence, avoiding Stengel's glare.)

Stengel: "Now, when Moore comes up——"

Phelps (engrossed in debate with Mungo over the same movie both saw in Tampa): " . . . And then Mae West says 'You are my man and I am your woman, and through eternity we belong to each other—always.'"

Stengel (screaming): "When Moore comes up——"

Mungo (hoarse whisper): "He says 'A great true love is sacred. No one has the right to come between us—not even a husband,' he says."

Bucher: "Stand for who?"

Zachary: "Thanks (stuffs face, expectorates.) Ppp-tew."

Earnshaw: "Somebody stole my socks! (slams locker.) How can a fellow pitch without socks? (Turns to Bordagaray and snatches his foot.) Look, look, everybody, here they are!"

Bordagaray: "What? (Mock innocence) . . . These?"

Earnshaw (very Swarthmore): "If you'll pardon me, Mr. Bordagaray, I want to say that this is not exactly the proper esprit de corps. You lack the cameraderie certain gentlemen athletes expect from one another. I repeat, will you remove my haberdashery?"

Bordagaray: "No."

Earnshaw (shouting): "Take those damn things off before I bust your damn legs."

Phelps: "Oh-oh George swore. He said 'damn.'"

Zachary: "My brother married a girl from Newbern. She always swore."

Mungo and Phelps (brightly and in unison): "Was she a big blonde with freckles?"

Zachary (ignoring them): "Newbern ain't a bad town. They got a nice nine-hole course there. I made it in 47."

Earnshaw: "M-m-m-m. And my garters . . . they're gone, too."

Zachary: "I used borrow clubs. They belonged to a fellow went to school with me. Had his arm shot off in France. They shot it off clean to the elbow joint . . . pp-tew!"

There is a lull. Stengel sits speechless. Suddenly the boy trips and spills his tray of pop. Then the phone rings, the clock strikes and the cheering of fans is heard as the curtain falls. All exit leaving a dazed figure alone, his lips working silently. It is Stengel.

Time, late afternoon. Scene, same. As the curtain rises the clubhouse boy holds a stack of fresh towels as he talks into the phone.

Walper Takes Rolling Road Tourney

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30.—Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range professor, led the field in the Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers Association tournament that marked the opening of the links season for the pros today at Rolling Road. He scored a 68, going out in the record-equaling figures of 30. He and Mel Shorey, pro at the East Potomac Park public course in Washington, had the best-ball low of 30—34—64.

Second to Walper in the individual sweepstakes was Ralph Beach, of Suburban Club, with 35—34—69, and third was Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam, with 37—36—73. Beach and his partner, Frank Invernizzi, of Forest Park, finished second with 34—32—66.

At the business session which preceded the tournament, Alec Taylor, pro at Rolling Road, was chosen president; George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring, was named first vice president; Ralph Beach, second vice president, and William Schreiber, of Clifton-Mount Pleasant, secretary-treasurer.

Eight professionals were admitted to membership in various classes. In the junior Class A group is Roland MacKenzie, of Congressional Country Club, Washington, who needs to serve two more years as a pro before becoming eligible for full membership. In Class C is Richard E. Flynn, of Washington. Class D members are Allen J. Burton and Daniel E. Burton, of the Army-Navy Club, Washington; James Flattery, Rodgers Forge, and Nevin Kendrick and Elmer Lowe, of Hillendale.

The schedule of play will be announced at a meeting to be held at Indian Spring on April 13. The results of the tournaments.

Injunction to Halt Races Refused in Arkansas

Little Rock, Ark., March 30 (AP).—Chancellor Frank H. Dodge dismissed on grounds of jurisdiction today a petition of Attorney General Carl E. Bailey for an injunction to halt the Hot Springs horse races, but said "there is no doubt in my mind that the Arkansas Racing Commission and the Oaklawn Jockey Club had violated the law."

Terp Stickmen Play Harvard In Opener

9 Veterans in Maryland Lineup for Contest Thursday.

NINE veteran stickmen will be in the line-up when the University of Maryland's 1936 lacrosse team goes to the post Thursday afternoon at College Park for its initial test of the season. Harvard, which has been easy prey for the Old Liners in the past, will supply the opposition for the occasion.

Gorton Lindsay, sophomore center to whom Coach Jack Faber has taken a fancy, will be the lone rookie on the team when the centers line-up for the first scrimmage. He is expected to be a valuable asset in a position where Maryland was woefully weak last year.

The starting team probably will find Jack Kelly goalie; Lou Ennis, point; Jim Hart, cover-point; Charlie Yaeger, first defense; Ike Rabbitt or Oden Bowie, second defense; Lindsay, center; Herb Brill, second attack; Pierce McCubbin, first attack; Johnny Christhilf, outhome; Charlie Ellinger, in-home.

All are lettermen with the exception of Yaeger and Lindsay, and Yaeger would have won the coveted "M," but for a shoulder injury that put him on the shelf the greater part of last season.

George Watson, a sophomore, appears to be the only experienced man with any chance of breaking into the line-up on short notice, and is pressing McCubbin for an attack berth.

Steeple Entries To Close April 8

Baltimore Races Will Be Run on Hereford Farm.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 30.—Entries for the thirty-seventh annual grand national point-to-point and the third annual Churchville Cup race will close Wednesday, April 8, J. Raiman McIntosh, secretary of the race committee, announced today.

The two races will be run over courses on the Hereford farm, north of Baltimore on the York road, on Saturday, April 18. The following Saturday the Maryland Hunt Cup will be run in the Worthington Valley over the estates of William J. Y. Martin and C. L. A. Heiser.

The Grand National will be over a 3-mile course and through natural country. Weights for 4-year-olds have been set at 155 pounds, 5-year-olds at 160 uounds, 6-year-olds at 165 pounds, with no other allowances.

Each horse must be ridden by an amateur holding a certificate from the hunts committee of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association. A silver cup and a leg on the gold challenge cup will be given the winning rider.

Sunday Games Wanted.

The Plaza Wine and Liquor Store baseball club is seeking Sunday games with unlimited teams. Manager Bill Sykes reports 30 candidates out for the team and prospects for a powerful nine are bright with such veterans as Newman, Di Nenna, Doughty, Miller, Wilner and Anderson available. For games call Miller, Metropolitan 9877.

Team on Edge For Basket Tourney

Guyon Believes They Are 'Just Right' for N. Y. Title Defense.

By John R. Vosburgh.

COACH CHARLIE GUYON, the former Ojibway papoose from Minnesota, watched his great Eastern High basketball team dispose of a collegiate crew yesterday over at Eastern. The high school boys were in fine fettle as they walked off the floor with a 36-30 victory.

They looked very much as if they would take fine care of themselves Thursday, Friday and Saturday when they defend their Eastern States championship at Glens Falls, N. Y. The old chief, sitting there like some wise old Buddha, with his hands clasped in front of him, thought so, too.

"They're just right," he pronounced. "They're just where I want 'em. They have to be just right mentally as well as physically, and that's just what they are.

"But," he predicted, "it's going to be tougher this year. It's going to be a lot tougher than it was last year. This year they're all pointing for us. Last year, they didn't know how strong we might be. They do now, all right."

Collegians Unable to Cope.

Tossing the sphere for the college squad were Bill Wood and Heinie Hoffman, erstwhile Maryland cagers; Gay Edelin, of Georgetown; Ed Delisio, of St. John's; Charlie Miller, of V. M. I., and Ted Capelli, of Duke. The men with the higher education had a tough time keeping the schoolboys in check.

In fact, the schoolboys were doing most of the checking. In the meantime, Lavelle, (Dope) Dean and Bill Buckholtz were leading the scoring, with Dean doing much damage with his pot-shot specialties. By the end of the first half Eastern had converted the 7-to-3 first-quarter deficit into a 17-to-15 lead.

The collegians were unable to stem the stride. Eastern led, 28 to 25, going into the last quarter, and it was obvious that the young men from the Northeast section are now zooming along at the peak of their form.

Tonight at 7:30 they will end their season in Washington against an all-star Government five, composed entirely of former college aces. The game will be the preliminary to that at Tech High between the Rinaldi Tailors and the McPherson Oilers, National A. A. U. champions.

There seem to be a few minor discrepancies anent Eastern's 1935-36 record, and to get the whole business finally straight we are letting the scorebook speak for itself, as follows:

Eastern, 35; Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, 19.

Capital Parks Assumes Pin Loop Lead

I. B. E. W., Beaten Twice, Investigation Keeps Third Position.

NATIONAL CAPITAL PARKS again assumed the role of pace-makers in the Federal League last night at Arcadia, ousting I. B. E. W. from the lead by scoring three wins over Public Schools while I. B. E. W. was taking the rap twice from Interstate Commerce.

The Parks crew now holds a two-game lead with but two weeks of the schedule remaining. Interstate's victory brought them out of the cellar for the first time this season. George Miller, rolling at anchor for the pace-setters, turned in a 166 game for a new season record, bettering by one pin the mark formerly held by Jerry Cowden.

Investigation, three games out of first place, retained the No. 3 position with two wins over Highway Department. G. P. O. took the odd game from the Union Printers and Veterans Administration with top game of the night with 633, upset Navy Yard two games.

The all-time league team game record was broken twice in the Navy Department League last night at the Arcadia drives. Ordnance scoring a total of 633 which stood up for exactly 10 minutes when Navy Yard came along to chalk up a game of 649. The former mark was 624. Joe Gauzza (Navigation) carried away high individual honors with a 149-game and 378 set.

Schwartz Scores In Handball Play

Win Over Sharsee Puts Him in Second Round.

Jack Schwartz of the Jewish Community Center, former District champion, drove his way into the second round of the District A. A. U. handball championship last night on the Y. M. C. A. courts, with a 21-15, 21-8 victory over Tom Sharshee, of the Y. M. C. A. Jack Cowley of the "Y," the 1935 champion, is not defending his title because of an injury.

The opening day of the tournament was featured by the advance of Pete Stasinos of the "Y," former West Side "Y" star in New York who lost but two points in subduing C. Alvarado, 21-0, 21-2. Stasios is favored to give Schwartz his toughest run for the title. The first round of the doubles tourney is slated for tonight.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

Nats Shaping Up As Harris Hoped

order, young Buddy Lewis has proven an extremely agreeable surprise. At present on a terrific batting spree, he is pulling the ball into right field, a talent that is necessary to a good second-place hitter. But his speed, too, is a revelation and like Hill his presence minimizes the Nats' chances of hitting into double plays. There are signs, too, that he can bunt.

With Buddy Myer available, Harris had no problem in the third spot in the batting order. The steadiest hitter on the team, Myer is well-placed in the position that makes or breaks batting rallies and with Hill and Lewis in front of him crying to run, Myer's hits do not figure to be wasted.

Jake Powell's presence in the clean-up hitting role will be permanent only as long as Jake continues to smack the ball. He is a wild swinger who looks like a Palooka on one pitch and like a champion on the next, but added weight this season has lent new power to his blows and the homers he has been socking have contributed no little to Harris' belief that he is the man for the job. If Powell fails to continue his slugging, then Cecil Travis, the current fifth-place hitter will be moved to the clean-up role. Travis outhit Powell by 3 points last season, and of late has been pulling the ball to right field in an effort to take full advantage of his power.

The Nats' power at bat fails to diminish even as we get down to the sixth slot. Jimmy Stone, a .315 hitter last year, is in that position, which is significant of the consistency of the Nats' batting power. Like Lewis, Powell and Travis, Stone is the exponent of the extra-base hit.

Once the best sixth-place hitter in the league, Joe Kuhel finds himself again in seventh spot this season after a dismal .261 record last year, but Harris scents a return to the form which stamped Kuhel a .323 hitter in 1933.

With Cliff Bolton following Stone, the Nats apparently boast an eighth-place batter beyond comparison. The other hard-hitting catchers of the league, Bill Dickey, Rick Ferrell, Mickey Cochrane and Rollie Hemsley all are being utilized farther up in the batting order, but Harris' unbroken array of power permits him to employ a .300 hitter in eighth place.

Veteran Trainer Dies After Kick by Horse

San Mateo, Calif., March 30 (AP).—Jack Harris, 62, of Pleasonton, Calif., veteran horseman, who was kicked in the head Friday at Tanforan race track, died today.

Harris was leading his horse, Brown Idyll, off the track when Inheritor, out for a breeze with Jockey Helm up, came around a turn. Harris tried vainly to dodge under the rail, but one of Inheritor's hoofs struck him.

Ramey Beaten, Title Hopes Blasted

Del Genio, in Stunning Upset, Puts Joe Out of Lightweight Race.

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Young Leonard Del Genio, of New York, stablemate of Champion Tony Canzoneri, blasted the hopes of another lightweight challenger tonight by pounding out an upset 10-round decision over Wesley Ramey, of Grand Rapids, Mich., stormy petrel of the 135-pound division.

Del Genio's victory before 4,000 fans at St. Nicholas Arena was as stunning as it was tragic for Ramey, who was to appear tomorrow before the ..ew York Boxing Commission and demand that no challenger be given a shot at Canzoneri's crown before meeting him.

Del Genio, who not long ago forced Indian Hurtado out of the lightweight running, entered the ring tonight a 4-to-1 underdog in the betting against the highly touted Ramey, who for more than five years has been swashbuckling up and down the rings of four continents meeting all comers.

The New York boxer was given a tremendous ovation when he received the split decision, voted by Judges Charles Devlin and Charlie Lynch and Referee Arthur Donovan. Del Genio undoubtedly had a slight margin of advantage because he had meted out the most punishment and landed the cleaner blows throughout. The United Press score sheet gave the New Yorker five rounds, Ramey four and one was even.

Del Genio, who scaled 135¾ pounds, won the third, fourth, seventh, eighth and tenth rounds. Ramey, who weighted 133½, took the first, second, fifth and ninth. The sixth was even, according to the United Press score sheet.

Ambers Offered $4,000 To Fight Wesley Ramey

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 30 (AP).—W. T. Morrissey, fight promoter, notified the New York Boxing Commission today that he has offered Lou Ambers $4,000 to meet Wesley Ramey, Grand Rapids lightweight, here next month.

Dnieper, in Workout, Does 9 Furlongs in 1:50

Tropical Park, Fla., March 30 (AP). Dnieper, which will be Mrs. P. A. B. Widener 2d's candidate for the $5,000 Derby Consolation stakes at Tropical Park Saturday and will be a running mate for J. E. Widener's Brevity in the Kentucky Derby, worked a sensational mile and a furlong in 1:50 here today. The Kieve colt's fractional times for the trial, which was made over the Hialeah oval, were: :24, :48, 1:00, 1:12 3-5, 1:37, 1:50.

Gophers Open Spring Grid Training

100 Out for Team as Snow Falls; Unbeaten Since 1932.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, March 30.—Minnesota's Golden Gophers faced one major question as approximately 100 gridders late today raced on the field for the opening session of the spring training grind—Can we make it four in a row?

Undefeated since 1932, the Gophers ploughed through three successive seasons without a loss, although tied in 1933.

Only one of the co-captains answered the call today. Julius Alfonse, right half, unable to play last year because of scholastic troubles, was at his post, but Ed Widseth, giant tackle weighing 225 pounds, was busy with the baseball team.

Despite loss by graduation of Glenn Seidel, Babe Levoir, Sheldon Beise and George Roscoe in the backfield, and Dick Smith, Vern Oech and others in the line, Coach Bernie Bierman still has a potent force to weld into another formidable eleven.

Clarence "Tuffy" Thompson, Andy Uram, Rudy Gmitro and Bill Matheny, the "speed quartet" all left halfs, are back as well as Alfonse at right half.

Another powerful line is assured with Ray King and Dwight Reed at the ends, Widseth and Louis Midler at the tackles, Charles Wilkinson and Bob Weld at the guards and Bud Svendsen at center—all veterans. Bierman will also get aid from one of the best looking sophomore groups in Minnesota history.

Starting tomorrow, the "heat" will be on, Bierman indicated.

Bierman put his squad through the first rudimentary drills today, using both the field house and the practice grids, as a light snow fell at intervals.

Western High Nine To Meet Trainers

Promising Team to Play Opener Tomorrow.

The most promising baseball team Western High has uncovered in several years will open the Washington high school season tomorrow when it meets National Training School on the Trainers' diamond at 3:30 p. m. On Friday the Georgetowners will steal another march on the other schools when it tackles Georgetown Prep at Garrett Park.

With an abundance of material, Coach Cliff Moore has already molded a club which will probably carry the brunt of the 1936 campaign. His pitching staff is especially heartening in view of the return of Ted Kinsman and Bob Rafterry, veteran right handers.

The catching duties were left vacant by the graduation of Bill Summerbell, and Johnny Aloginus, experienced sandlot product, has the inside track on the assignment at this writing. The infield seeing action recently has been Henry Doyle on first, Emery Prince, second base; Bill Lanhan, third base, and Bud Lawyer, shortstop.

The outfield is even more permanent so far as two-thirds of it is concerned, for Paul Borden and Capt. Bill Edmonston are again back in uniform. The other post is more or less open, with the Cuban Rafael Cabrera and the Puerto Rican Manuel Inglesias in the lead.

Blakeney Takes Lead at Hartford

Bovello Captain Shoots a Total of 1,193.

Hartford, Conn., March 30.—Ed Blakeney winner of the Eastern Sweepstakes and captain of the Bovello All-Stars, took the lead in the all-events bowling competition with a total of 1,193. He shot 402 in doubles, 392 in singles and 399 in team, to displace Harry Wolfe, of Hyattsville.

Bill Clampitt, a teammate, shot 409 in singles to take sixth place and 1,165 to tie Bob Temple for third place in all-events.

The Bovello All-Stars shot 1,832 to take fourth place in team standing.

Two Teams Seek to Join Parks Tennis League

Possible increase in the membership of the Public Parks Tennis League was forecast last night at a meeting of the organization at the Tennis Shop. Fair Lawn Park and Anacostia are the new applicants for membership and would make it a six team league with Monument, Rock Creek, Pierce Mill, Potomac Park as the other members.

Muscoe Garnett, of the Monument team was elected president to succeed Alan Staubley, the retiring executive. Jim Heiskell, of Montrose, was elected vice president; Felix Silva, of Monument, secretary, and Bill Shreve, of Rock Creek, treasurer. The league season will open on the first Saturday in May. Monument is the defending champion.

18 Join 1936 Hole-in-One Club

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Sixteen men and two women marched into sport's newest and most exclusive hall of fame as charter members today.

The 18 were officially registered as members of the club that recognizes luck and the breaks of golf, but nothing above the figure "1." It's the Associated Press "Hole in One Club," open only to those who can thrust out their chests and prove they made an ace on or after January 1, 1936.

On the basis of first returns, Dallas, Tex., is the haven for the proud ace-shooting brigade. Of the first 18 to report, 7 were registered on Dallas courses alone. Fort Worth, keen rival of its sister city even in the production of aces, "warmed up" with only 1, but will have more than 20 by the end of the year, advised Amos Melton, golf editor of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Taking the individual lead, however, was Grover W. Collier, a Memphis railroader who makes aces look as easy as sixes. On Sunday, March 8, Collier strolled over the Riverside Municipal course and made hole-in-one history by scoring two aces within the space of one hour. He scored his first on the third hole, a stretch of 200 yards. Then, just to prove it wasn't a fluke, the Memphis railroader boomed a wood shot that sailed straight and true over traps and fairway for 275 yards and into the cup of the seventh green. Most golfers would have collapsed on the spot with such a display of golfing genius, but not Mr. Collier. He calmly finished his round with a 29 on the nine hole, par 35 layout for a new course record of 29 blows. Normally a par shooter, Collier had an ace to his record before his double collection, but only those count on the Hole-in-One Club that have been scored this year.

William Schwartz, of Marysville, Kans., joined up by proving the same man can score two aces on the same hole on the same golf course. A year ago Schwartz scored a hole-in-one on the 137-yard eighth at Marysville. Even his best friends kidded him about it. But he got the supreme thrill and satisfaction by hauling out his trusty 5-iron and scoring an ace on the very same hole—this time before three witnesses.

The two women joiners were Helen Dettweiler, young tournament star from the Congressional Club at Washington, D. C., and Mrs. P. C. French, St. Joseph, Mo., housewife. Miss Dettweiler suffered a slight case of heartache before she returned to the clubhouse, however. She tallied her ace on the seventh hole of her first round match against Hilda Livengood, Danville, Ill., in the South Atlantic women's championship at Ormond Beach, Fla. Yet she was defeated after a thrilling duel that ended on the eighteenth green. Mrs. French, champion of the Moila Club of St. Joseph, collected her ace with a driver on the 150-yard seventh.

Leo Walling, of Dallas, won the club's palm as the most modest member. After playing golf for only three days, Leo achieved what thousands of fine golfers dream about—an ace on a 190-yarder at the El Tivoli Country Club. He promptly forgot about it, his final scoring skying over the 100 mark. A few days later he knocked the club pro flat by casually asking: "Isn't it considered pretty good to make a hole-in-one shot?" The pro, according to latest reports, is still suffering from the shock.

Jobs Increase Is Seen by Sloan In Rebuilding

Much of Nation's Plant Is Obsolete, Says General Motors Head.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 30 (AP)—Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of General Motors Corporation, declared today that the rebuilding of the Nation's "obsolete" productive plant would create profitable employment for millions of persons. In a discussion of various phases of current social and economic problems in the corporation's annual report, Sloan said, in part:

"The corporation is convinced that there exists today a tremendous potential demand for consumers goods in order to meet the unsatisfied desires of the public. It believes that there is also a very important opportunity for the production of capital goods.

"America's productive plant today is, to an important degree, obsolete. If rebuilt, even in part, to take advantage of today's technological advance, there would be created profitable employment for millions and with more efficient instruments of production now available, there would result lower costs of goods and services."

Status of Workers.

Reviewing his company's policies for stabilizing employment conditions, Sloan expressed the opinion that it was "vitally important" for industry to give greater attention to the economic position of its workers.

"The fact must be accepted," he continued, "that whatever may be accomplished in expanding industry's markets from without, in the form of export sales, everything must be done to develop, to the greatest possible extent, consuming power—for industry's products among ourselves; i. e., within our country.

"As a matter of fact there lies our greatest opportunity. This is not only more important today than it has been in the past, but it will continue to be more important as time passes."

Prudential Funds Are Now Insured

Savings in shares of the Prudential Building Association are now insured by the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation, an agency of the United States Government, E. J. Carlson, secretary of the association, announced yesterday. The certificate of insurance has been received from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and individual investors are protected against loss up to $5,000.

The Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation, created by Congress in June, 1934, affords protection for investors in thrift and home-financing institutions, similar to that given depositors in commercial banks by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation with one material distinction. The FDIC, organized in 1933, insured bank deposits, subject to demand withdrawal, whereas the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation operates in the long-term savings and home-financing field.

Standard of Indiana Earns $30,179,000

Chicago, March 30 (AP).—Edward G. Seubert, president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, announced today that the company's consolidated net profit in 1935 was $30,179,000. This amount was equivalent to $1.98 a share on the 15,215,677 shares outstanding at the close of the year, he said. If the earnings for 1935 were computed on the basis of 1934, the comparison would reflect an increase of 38 cents a share for 1935 over 1934, he added.

Youngstown Sheet and Tube.

Cleveland, March 30 (AP).—Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. reported today net profit in 1935 of $1,597,521 compared with net loss of $2,665,119 in 1934. Gross sales totaled $86,788,923, an increase of 37.4 per cent over 1934. Net profit, after deducting an amount equivalent to one year's dividend on the preferred shares, amounted to 64 cents a share on the common.

Steel Imports Cost Workers $16 in Wages

Institute Analyzes Effect of Increased Purchases From Abroad.

New York, March 30.—Every employe of the steel industry was deprived of an average of about $16 in wages during 1935 as a result of sharply increased imports of iron and steel from foreign countries, the American Iron and Steel Institute has calculated from reports published by the Department of Commerce and Department of Labor. Additional losses in pay were also suffered by employes of mining and transportation companies engaged in supplying the steel industry with raw materials.

During 1935 a total of 405,221 gross tons of foreign-made iron and steel products were admitted into this country—a 49 per cent increase over 1934 imports of 272,369 gross tons. The volume of iron and steel exports, however, exclusive of scrap, which is not commonly sold by the steel industry, declined about 4 per cent from 1934.

Almost the entire tonnage of imported iron and steel competes directly with products regularly made in this country. About 93 per cent of the tonnage exported from this country, however, is bought by nations which either produce no steel or are dependent on outside sources for a large part of the steel required to satisfy local demand.

Approximately 13,414,000 man-hours of work—equivalent to 6,450 full-time jobs—would have been required if the imported iron and steel had been made in this country, it is estimated.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Dullest Stock Trading Day in Six Months; Wheat Higher; Franc Improves.

New York, March 30.—Only the usual high-stepping favorites covered any distance in today's dull trading. Stock volume of under a million shares was the smallest since October 9, when 882,910 shares were traded. Prices were irregularly lower. Bonds were inactive; commodity markets were mixed, with May wheat fractionally higher and cotton easy. Foreign exchange steadied.

Up to the start of the final hour only five stocks had recorded sales of more than 10,000 shares each: General Motors, Bendix, Pierce Petroleum, Radio and Socony-Vacuum. The latter touched a new low on a fractional loss.

J. I. Case added more than six points to last week's gain of 11¼ points. Chicago Yellow Cab and Checker Cab were three or four points higher and Midland Steel Products and Waukesha Motor were not far behind. Allied Chemical, International Harvester, American Telephone and Westinghouse Electric picked up a point or so.

In the foreign exchange market most of the alarms of Saturday were dissipated for the time being. In the first place, the week-end passed with no action by the French authorities to interfere with a gold exodus, should one develop. Such repressive and preventive action had been rumored. Furthermore, the higher French bank rate appeared to be having some slight effect, at least upon internal hoarding of French currency. A statement by Marcel Regnier, French finance minister, reiterating that there would be no devaluation of the franc in his administration also was somewhat reassuring to the market.

The franc, which on Saturday dropped almost a point under the level at which gold could be shipped here from Paris, rallied to around 6.59 cents, at which level there is little profit in gold shipments. So thin was the market and so brief was the stay of the franc in the lower regions that it appeared this afternoon that little gold would come here unless the depression in French currency is more sustained.

Though the franc held up and the pound sterling was buoyant above $4.95, guilders and Swiss francs had unsettled markets, the former holding well under the gold shipping level.

In the stock market, March came in like a lion and is going out like a lamb. Trading in the first half of the month averaged more than 2,500,000 shares daily; in the last half it has crossed 2,000,000 shares only twice. The highest for the month was 2,978,740 on March 4. Turnover for the 26 trading days, with tomorrow estimated generously, apparently will be about 51,500,000 shares, compared with 60,884,392 in February and 67,201,745 for January, but this is more than 5,000,000 shares better than in December and is the largest for March since 1931. A year ago volume was less than one-third this level.

The most active stocks of the month were E. G. Budd, Chrysler, Columbia Gas, Consolidated Oil, Curtiss-Wright, Electric Power & Light, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, North American Aviation, Radio, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Studebaker, U. S. Rubber, U. S. Steel and Yellow Truck.

At the end of last week The Sun's average price of 20 industrial stocks was 2½ per cent higher than at the close of February. Although the average is unweighted, it is influenced by the sharp increase in price of Allied Chemical, General Motors, tSandard of New Jersey, and Interantional Harvester. In fact, nine of the twenty issues were lower on the month.

The advance in the average marks the twelfth successive monthly rise, which sets industrials 57 per cent higher than a year ago. However, the railroad group of ten stocks is 3½ per cent less than in February, although 81 per cent higher than a year ago.

The selective character of the rise in the recent irregular markets and the heaviness of the carrier group are giving concern to chartists at the same time that they consider cheerfully the small volume of selling on declines. The appetite for stocks seems to be waiting for new spice in business and political news.

No Contest.

The Interstate Commerce Commission approval of the issue of equipment trust certificates by two railroad subsidiaries of U. S. Steel Corporation gives the steel company some choice investments although at a record low rate of 2½ per cent. The roads went through the form of receiving competitive bids and received many requests for information, but only two bids. The parent company hardly was surprised to be the winner on a bid of par and accrued interest.

Imitation.

The Corn Exchange Bank Trust Co. should feel flattered that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, in tabulating the statement figures of the 14,121 insured commercial banks, has adopted the style which the bank has used for many years in making up condensed statements that "any man or woman can understand."

Competition.

Comment even among market letter writers on changes in margin rules effective April 1 for brokers and May 1 for banks continues to assay a high percentage of nonsense about "competition" between banks and brokers under the old rules. Even if traders took their collateral to the bank, banks were not in the commission business; they simply transmitted the orders to a broker. If the borrower were important he probably paid little higher interest at the brokerage house than at the bank; if he were a small trader, his interest rate probably was at least as high at the bank as the rate charged by the commission house. In other words, the brokers lost little in the form of interest charges and nothing in commission except for a chance to prod a customer to trade more frequently.

Brown Sons Moving Office Here on April 1

A contemplated development in the building construction field here will affect the local branch of one of the oldest banking investment firms in this country, Alex. Brown & Sons, of Baltimore.

It is understood that the building located at 734 Fifteenth street northwest is to be replaced with another structure. In view of this circumstance Alex. Brown & Sons, who have been located at that address for a number of years, have sent notices to their friends that after April 1 they will be located in suite 528-531 Union Trust Building, which is situated immediately next to their present location.

Alex. Brown & Sons were founded in Baltimore in 1800. Throughout their existence they have played an important part in the industrial and financial development of the Nation. The scope of their influence dates back even beyond the organization of the first railroad in America, the Baltimore & Ohio, the financing of which was accomplished largely through Alex. Brown & Sons. In recent years they have been very closely identified with one of the Nation's major financial operations, the distribution of more than a billion dollars' worth of Feder Land Bank bonds. The firm has membership in the New Yorw Stock Exchange and the Baltimore Stock Exchange.

The present partners in the firm are B. Howell Griswold, jr., Thomas Hildt, W. N. Stromenger, Alex. Brown Griswold, Harry Swope and B. Howell Griswold 3d.

Ches. & Pot. Telephone.

Operating revenues of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. for February were $862,841, according to the report of operations filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia. This compares with $794,355 for February last year. Net operating revenues were $181,100, compared with $146,889 for February a year ago.

Washington was served by 204,055 telephones on February 29, as compared with 191,439 on the same date last year. This was a net increase of 12,616 telephones over the number in service at the end of February a year ago.

Sugar 5 Cents Pound, Highest in 6 Years

New York, March 30 (AP).—Refined sugar was advanced .15 of a cent a pound to 5 cents by the large refineries in this district today, carrying the price, effective tomorrow, to the highest level in six years. The mark-up was the third in six weeks and served to focus attention on the firm position of the spot raw market, which has been creeping steadily upward in recent weeks under a heavy demand by refiners, speculators and brokers. Shipment sugars were quoted as high as 3.85 cents in the raw market today, with nearby positions at 3.80 to 3.83 cents.

Penn Road Net Gains for Year By $2,215,833

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, March 30.—The net income of the Pennsylvania Railroad for 1935, as shown by its annual report, amounted to $23,849,798, an increase over 1934 of $2,215,833. Operating revenues amounted to $367,812,186, an increase of $24,143,487; passenger revenue increased $2,056,592, being the second successive year to show an increase over the preceding year since 1926.

The improvement in operating revenues was offset, the report states, by an increase of $17,132,347 in operating expenses which, including taxes, hire of equipment, etc., amounted to $297,417,545.

The report states that the "railroads are continually faced with legislation which increases their cost of operation without any real benefit either to themselves or the public. Legislation which increases the costs to railroads, such as compulsory pensions, unemployment insurance, six-hour day, increases in corporation tax rates and in the rate of tax on capital stock are shared by industry generally."

Norfolk & Western.

Philadelphia, March 30 (AP).—Although restoration of wage deductions and increased cost of materials and supplies affected all accounts, the Norfolk & Western Railway Co.'s net income for 1935 showed an increase of $5,075,670 over 1934.

The company's annual report, made public today, showed net income of $25,355,852 for last year, and explained that general expenses were decreased "mainly by reason of credit adjustments after the railroad retirement act was declared unconstitutional."

The company showed a net revenue from operations of $33,545,219, or an increase of $5,368,609. Income balance, after paying the regular 4 per cent dividend of $919,692 upon the adjustment preferred stock and an extra dividend of $2 per share on common stock, $22,812,966 was $31,623,194, an increase of $5,075,670.

N. Y., N. H. & Hartford.

New Haven, Conn., March 30 (AP). President Howard S. Palmer, in his annual statement to stockholders, made public tonight, reported the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co. had a deficit of $3,560,469 for 1935 after fixed charges. The deficit was $1,971,645 lower than that of 1934, and did not include $1,123,439 guarantees on separately operated properties.

Gross revenues amounted to $71,113,280, an increase of $1,830,170 or 2.6 per cent over 1934. Total operating expenses of $52,414,423 for 1935 were $299,789 lower than the previous year.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

AS MAN TO MAN
Are you qualified for a new job? Is it not a fact that most men have been associated in their old line too long? STOP AND THINK: Does your product or idea justify your time? Are you convinced that there is an absolute buying demand for your article NOW? Look at these figures for last week: L. C. S., $109.00; H. L., $131.00; M. E. C., $75.00; S. P. S., $80.00.

WE NEED MEN
for Washington, Maryland and Northern Virginia. Men who are without jobs and those who are unprofitably employed should immediately interview the writer of this ad, who is a factory executive, and learn of the great possibilities of a new invention that is going over big and making men from $40.00 to $150 per week. Sales ability is not essential. We will discount sales experience in favor of a genuine desire to work hard and learn. There is no investment on your part and we pay you weekly. We have a limited number of openings for men who qualify —good appearance, age 25 to 45 and good references. Early promotion offered. APPLY TUESDAY ONLY, 9 A. M. or 1:30 P. M., Hamilton Hotel, 14th and K Sts. N.W. Ask at desk for Mr. Haynes. (Do not apply unless ready to go to work at once if selected.)

AND NOT ONE OF THEM HAS GOT A HIT, FAY!
IT'S UNBELIEVABLE, FOLKS—RED LIGHT IS STANDING THESE SLUGGING MAJOR LEAGUERS ON THEIR HEADS WITH HIS FAMOUS SNAKE BALL
WHAT I'D GIVE FOR THAT BOY! WHY, HE'D WIN 40 GAMES IN ANY LEAGUE!
ONE THING'S SURE—NONE OF US GETS HIM UNTIL HE FINISHES SCHOOL STRIKE THREE—BATTER'S OUT!

Virginian Cites State's Beauties At Travelogue

Hall Urges Washingtonians to Pay Visits During Garden Week.

Washingtonians were invited to visit Virginia during Garden Week, April 27 to May 2, last night by Wilbur C. Hall, State Conservation Commission chairman, at a Washington Post travelogue meeting in Masonic Temple.

He explained many of the Old Dominion's famous homes and gardens will be thrown open to the public for inspection.

"Northern Virginia,' he said, "presents three sections: The Tidewater, extending from the sea to the foothills; the Piedmont, covering the area from the beginning of the foothills to the mountains, and the beautiful Shenandoah Valley, the region west of the Blue Ridge.

"The Piedmont, traversed by railway lines, has always been known to the public, and the Shenandoah Valley, the pioneer section of Virginia in good roads, has ever been visited by the lovers of lovely scenery.

"But the Tidewater, the country in which the United States was born, the country of Washington and Lee and many another great man, is just coming to the notice of the public through the establishment of good roads."

"In Eastern Virginia," he said, "one finds oneself transported to the Colonial era.

"Indeed, in Williamsburg, the ancient capital of Virginia restored to its eighteenth century appearance by the generosity of John D. Rockefeller, jr., one might imagine oneself transported by Hans Anderson's magic galoshes back 200 years but for the presence of the ubiquitous automobile.

"It is a scene that can be reconstructed in the mind's eye nowhere else in all America."

Hall quoted and reiterated for the State as a whole the suggestion of Maj. J. W. Thomason in his book, "Jeb Stuart:"

Agents Seize Alcohol Smuggled From Belgiun

Boston, March 30 (U.P.).—Seizure by customs officials today of 2,400 gallons of smuggled Belgian alcohol in the basement of a Revere dwelling was revealed by Customs Collector Joseph A. Maynard. Officials said a man described as the owner of the house was taken into custody.

Smuggling of the alcohol, Maynard said, defrauded the Government of $31,920 in revenue.

Former Senator Dill Seeks Divorce

FORMER SENATOR AND MRS. CLARENCE C. DILL.

Former Senator Dill Files Suit For Divorce, Charging Cruelty

By the Associated Press.

Spokane, Wash., March 30.—Former Senator Clarence C. Dill, of Washington, filed suit today for divorce from the former "General" Rosalie Jones, of New York, women's rights advocate.

Dill charged cruelty, alleging in his complaint that Mrs. Dill embarrassed him by wearing "filthy" clothing, burying dead dogs and garbage in the yard of their Spokane mansion, offending labor when the Senator needed its support for re-election, refusing to serve food enough to feed guests, and finally leaving him.

The Dills were married at Cold Springs Harbor, Long Island, March 15, 1927.

"Love at First Sight."

New York, March 30 (AP).—Mrs. Clarence C. Dill's romance with the former United States Senator from Washington, who filed suit for divorce today, was a case of "love at first sight," it was recalled tonight.

The former "General" Rosalie Gardiner Jones, suffragist leader, used those words to describe her meeting with Dill when, as a delegate in a peace movement, she was introduced to him in Washington in 1924.

Three years later—on March 15, 1927—the then United States Senator and the nationally known suffragist leader were married in a private ceremony at Cold Springs Harbor, N. Y. In the Episcopal marriage ceremony, the word "obey" was omitted, Mrs. Dill explaining she wished to retain her maiden name for professional purposes.

A week prior to her marriage, "General Rosalie" fell heir with two brothers to an estate valued at $5,000,000 left by her father, the late Dr. Oliver Livingston Jones.

Man Given 35 Years In Slaying Aboard Ship

Cristobal, Canal Zone, March 30 (AP).—Frank F. Boyd, former officer of the S. S. Santa Elena, was sentenced to 35 years in Gamboa Penitentiary today when he pleaded guilty to a second degree murder charge.

Intestinal Flu Hits 120,000 At Milwaukee

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, March 30.—An officially estimated 120,000 persons, one-fifth of the city's population, were ill and one man was dead today from an abdominal malady described by some health authorities as intestinal influenza.

Dr. John P. Koehler, city health commissioner, expressed the opinion that the epidemic was at its height and would begin to taper off by the middle of the week. In giving the estimate, he said one out of four of his acquaintances were either ill or had recovered.

The personnel of practically all factories, stores and offices was affected. One department store reported more than 200 clerks have been ill during the last week or ten days.

Dr. Koehler said the disease is communicable and apparently is transmitted by air or direct contact. Physicians said it usually sweeps through entire families.

Griping pains, nausea and diarrhea distinguish the malady. In many cases patients are bed-ridden several days. Dr. Koehler said that because the symptoms are akin to those of appendicitis, sufferers should consult a doctor.

Although a physician attributed the death of Edeward Heckel, 41, to intestinal influenza, Dr. Koehler said the malady sweeping the city could not be regarded as ordinarily fatal. The great danger, he said, is that it leaves the patient so weakened he is susceptible to more serious disease.

The malady was first discovered among school children several weeks ago. The majority of cases reported today were among adults.

The city's water is polluted, but Dr. Koehler said it was not responsible for the epidemic.

Spanish Peasants Seize Estates, Begin Farming

Badajoz, Spain, March 30 (AP).—Swarms of peasants, estimated by police to number 20,000, spread out over large estates again today and started farming operations. They were defying the government's orders that they await a legal redistribution of lands.

It was the second time in two weeks that the peasants had taken over the properties. Last Thursday they were driven off by heavy detachments of police, but these were withdrawn yesterday.

Spinster Steals And Kills Child Of Her Friend

Drowns 8-Year-Old Girl in Bathtub 'Because I Loved Her.'

By the United Press.

St. Louis, Mo., March 30.—Myrtle Wilkinson, 40-year-old spinster, in City Hospital recovering from a suicide attempt, sobbed out a story today of how she killed 8-year-old Marilyn Morgan in a bathtub "because I loved her."

Thwarted mother love, she said, led her to kidnap and kill the child, daughter of a life-long friend. She had reared the girl almost from birth.

Marilyn's mother, a waitress, known as Mrs. Helen Davies and Helen Morgan, said she had tried to break the woman's "influence" over her daughter.

"I did it," gasped Miss Wilkinson, rousing from a stupor, "because I loved her and her mother had taken her away from me; I had her for seven years.

"I don't know why I did it; something made me do it."

The odor of escaping gas attracted a janitor to the room Miss Wilkinson rented Saturday. He broke in and found the child dead in the bathtub, the women sitting in the kitchen before an open gas jet.

The stricken mother said she had paid her to keep the child from the time the girl was eight weeks old until last summer.

"Then I took the child away," she said.

"I work at night and last week when the housekeeper was busy, Miss Wilkinson came and took Marilyn out."

In a rambling note found in the newly rented apartment, Miss Wilkinson told of her love for the child and her inability to sleep since the mother took the girl away. She apparently had written it after drowning Marilyn.

"It was the only way to save an unfortunate helpless child from the clutches of a heartless woman," she wrote. "I consider I was her mother, as I fed her, cared for her day and night and through sickness."

Sheriff May Determine Winner in Indian Poll

Guadalupe, Ariz., March 30 (AP).—Whether the "reform" or the "good-time-to-all" ticket won in yesterday's election of Yaqui Indians to select a chief in Guadalupe Village appeared today a question likely to be settled by the sheriff.

The vote was by the "yea" and "nay" method and both candidates, Loretta Luna, a "dry" advocating reformation of the village, and Jesus Fores, liberal, with a "good-time" platform, claimed victory.

Cadet on Solo Flight Dies in Michigan Crash

Mount Clemens, Mich., March 30. (AP).—Flying Cadet Charles E. Kramer, 23, of Selfridge Field, was killed today when the pursuit plane in which he was making a solo training flight crashed two miles north of New Baltimore. Kramer's home is at Fulton, Ky.

The plane went into a sharp dive at about 500 feet, witnesses said. Kramer came to Selfridge Field a month ago from the Kelly Field training center, and was to have remained here a year.
